Accident Summary:

☐ The aircraft was estimated to have been in an autorotation and struck the ground in an upright manner at high speed. The blades struck the ground and dug into a rice paddy causing dislodging of the transmission and a portion of the rotor blade to land left and forward of the line of the wreckage. The aircraft struck the ground with the right side down, began to fly apart, roll, caught fire and finally came to rest inverted 140 to 160 meters from the point of initial contact.

Additional information about this casualty:

☐ I am a retired Army Aviator who served in Viet Nam with E Co, 725th Maint Bn, 25th Inf Div at Cu Chi, from May 1967-Apr 68. I have not joined the VHPA yet, but I recently read Section IV - KIA/MIA page 169 of the Directory and would like to offer an update to the information of a good friend of mine. Major Boyd E. Morrow, died as a result of injuries received when his UH-1H crashed at Dau Tang, north of Cu Chi, near the Rubber Plantation, while he was test flying it to check it out after engine repair. He and a engine repairman, using an engine analyser, were taking off before first light in the early morning when the engine failed at a low altitude and crashed. Boyd was evacuated to the hospital at Cu Chi and died from internal injuries. He had changed from his normal duty day to the the night shift in order to let his assistant maintenance officer transition to his duties because Boyd was preparing for his R&R in Hawaii in a week to meet his wife. Boyd and I were roommates in 1961-62 in the 6th Transportation Co (Lt Hel) at K-6 (Camp Humphrey's) South Korea. Let me know if you have any questions. Art Conroy, Colonel US Army Retired
