The Battalion command post was co-located with the Quang Dien District Headquarters (YD687341) the Battalion had two static defensive positions at FSB T-Bone (YD6520) and An Lo Bridge (YD6230). The pattern of operations was rotation of one company (-) for defense of FSB T-Bone with a platoon located at LZ Sally (Bn Rear) for a ready - reaction force; one company (-) at An Lo Bridge with one platoon operating in Houn Tra District; one company operating on the plains in Quang Dien District; and one company operating in the mountains of Nam Hoa District. The Battalion Reconnaissance platoon and mortar platoon were moved around the area of operations as situations developed.

(258 personnel rotated to CONUS during Dec training was conducted mainly at An Lo Bridge and FSB T-Bone. Highlights of the training were practical application of medivac technique and "Signs of VC/NVA Activity" presented by a team from the 1st ARVN Division.

One of the most important aspects of the Battalion's accomplishments was the development of the regional and popular forces in Quang Dien District. The measure of accomplishment in a training mission is generally intangible. However, the results obtained by this battalion through working with the PF/RF forces have been quite obvious. The FF and RF were confined to the limits of their compounds when the battalion arrived in the '60. The battalion made special efforts to work with these forces by presenting classes to them, moving them by air, and supporting them with both fire support and logistical support. The normal operation on the plains was to have a platoon of FF/RF attached to each company of this battalion.

By December the RF/PF had progressed to the point that they conducted on a regular basis independent operations and conducted airmobile assaults. The FF and RF in Quang Dien District have compiled, since this battalion's arrival, an outstanding record of victories over the VC and VC Infrastructure in Quang Dien District. By 31 December the district was one of the few areas in Vietnam which was safe for the district chief to travel throughout unescorted. This is especially significant when considering there were 3 NVA regiments and a strong VC Infrastructure located in the area when 1st Battalion 502d Infantry began operations in March.

Throughout 1968 the First Strike Battalion established ambitious objectives and accomplished them promptly and completely. Each mission was attacked aggressively and professionally. Everyone, both friendly and enemy, who had contact with the First Strike Battalion immediately recognized its professionalism and esprit. The Vietnamese appropriately refer to the First Strike Battalion as "The Airborne!" 1968 was indeed another glorious chapter in the history of the Battalion in its Rendezvous with Destiny.
