HISTORY OF I CORPS (GROUP)

1918 - 1919

On 15 January, I Corps was activated in Neufchateau, South of Toul, France, under Major General Hunter Liggett. It was the first US Corps organized and the first into battle in World War I. Its baptism of fire occurred 27 May 1918 when it repelled a German attack on the banks of the Marne. On 12 September the Corps took part in a large scale allied offensive which led to the German surrender. I Corps was inactivated on 25 March 1919 in Europe.

1940 - 1945

When the Second World War appeared inevitable, I Corps was reactivated 10 October 1940 at Columbia, South Carolina, under Major General Charles F. Thompson. The Corps engaged in rigid training until late in the summer of 1942 when it was ordered to Australia. The new Corps Commander, Maj. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, assumed command of all Allied Forces on British New Guinea, on 19 November 1942. It was the first allied victory in the Southwest Pacific, and by 22 January 1943 all enemy resistance had ended. For this coup, in which 10,000 Japanese were killed, the Corps won the Distinguished Unit Citation.

After a long training period, a Corps task force captured Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, and Baik Island in June, 1944. Maj. Gen. Innis P. Swift assumed command on 20 August 1944 and planned an amphibious invasion on northwest Luzon. The Corps drove 100 miles to the Philippine Sea in 34 days and then pushed 200 miles to the north coast to cut off the only enemy escape route. All major resistance in the north ended by late June. I Corps was preparing for its part in the contemplated invasion of Kyushu, Japan when the Japanese surrendered on 14 August 1945.

1945 - 1950

Twenty-three days after the surrender of Japan, advance elements of I Corps landed on the island of Honshu for occupation duty and further combat training. Commanding Generals during the period included Maj. Gens. Roscoe B. Woodruff, Joseph W. Swing and John B. Coutler. The Corps was inactivated on 28 March 1950.

1950 to Present

The I Corps was reactivated at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, on 2 August 1950, five weeks after the outbreak of the Korean Campaign. Advance elements of the Corps Headquarters assumed control of I ROK Corps and two small US units in the Pusan Perimeter 27 August 1950. The Corps became operational on 12 September 1950, under the command of Lt. Gen. Frank W. Milburn.

On 16 September I Corps launched an offensive to breakout of the perimeter and on 26 September linked forces with UN troops which had made an amphibious landing at Inchon. On 1 October the Corps had reached Chongju, 40 miles from the Yalu River. On 27 November massed Chinese armies attacked the Corps. UN forces began withdrawal, killing thousands of Communist troops. Seoul fell to the enemy late in the year.

By 15 January 1951 the Corps turned from defense to offense. On 14 March, Seoul was again liberated, and the Corps troops pushed on toward the 38th Parallel. The retreating enemy turned and fought back on 23 April when the Corps began to threaten the "Iron Triangle," a vital supply area in the Chorwon-Kumwha-Pyongkang area. Initially, the enemy gained ground by disregarding his staggering losses. But Corps troops traded heavy hostile casualties for terrain and halted the attack before the enemy had reached Seoul. The Corps turned the offensive again and by 27 May was established firmly along the Imjin River.

Action was light during the summer as armistice negotiations commenced in July. Lt. Gen. John W. O'Daniel assumed command of the Corps in July and in October launched "Operation Commando." This attack on the vital Chorwon area successfully placed the Corps front line on the most dangerous terrain.

In the intervening months, while negotiations continued at Panmunjom, the Corps maintained strong defensive positions. At the same time it continued aggressive patrols and raids to keep the enemy on the defensive. On 29 June 1952, Lt. Gen. Paul W. Kendall succeeded General O'Daniel, who became Commander of US Army Forces in the Pacific.

From September 1952 until the end of the year, I Corps units repulsed determined enemy attempts to wrest territory from the United Nations Forces. The names of Bunker Hill, the Hook, Kelly, Old Baldy, and Nori became synonymous with bravery and devotion to duty.

The first major action of 1953 began on the night of 23 March as the Chinese attacked Old Baldy in the 7th Infantry Division sector, and the Reno, Carson, and Vegas outposts in the 1st Marine Division sector. These attacks were repelled, and heavy enemy casualties were inflicted.

In the final months of the war, I Corps continued to beat back attack after attack of the fanatical enemy. When the truce was signed on the night of 27 July 1953, fighting men of America's I Corps had written another heroic chapter in the annals of history.

Since then I Corps has remained in a state of watchful waiting, alert and combat prepared in the event of another outbreak of hostilities. During this time, I Corps soldiers have contributed money, goods and technical aid to help rebuild the war ravaged land of Korea, through the Armed Forces Assistance to Korea (AFAK) Program.

Following the war in Korea, I Corps was delegated tactical control and supervision of the US, UN and ROK army units in the islands along the Han estuary, and in the western third of the Eighth US Army forward area. As such it became one of the largest corps in the history of the United States Army and on 28 June 1955 was redesignated I Corps (Group).

HISTORY OF THE U. S. 2ND INFANTRY DIVISION

A General Order, published by Headquarters, United States Army, Pacific, redesignated the 1st Cavalry Division, stationed in Korea, as the 2nd Infantry Division effective July 1, 1965.

Formally a part of the Strategic Army Corps, the 2nd Infantry Division was stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia. Their mission was one of combat readiness, with units engaged in a continuous training program to build and maintain an effective combat capability. Known as the Indianhead Division, its slogan is "Second to None".

Activated in Bourmont, France, on 26 October 1917, it was originally formed from Army and Marine Corps units with a Marine Corps brigadier general in command. In World War I the division won more decorations than any other American division, participating in six major campaigns. In World War II the 2nd Infantry Division landed at Normandy Beach on 7 June 1944, fought through France and Germany and had reached Pilsen, Czochoslovakia, when the European fighting ended.

The division entered the Korean War in early August 1950, where it was utilized in fire brigade action, moving swiftly to counter enemy threats to the Pusan Perimeter. As the conflict expanded, the division engaged the Chinese Communist Forces in many heroic actions. Finally on 20 August 1954, four years after it had arrived in Korea, the division was alerted for redeployment to the United States. The division returned to Fort Lewis, Washington where it remained until its transfer to Alaska on 1 August 1956.

On 8 November 1957, it was announced that the Indianhead Division was to be inactivated. However, in the spring of 1958 the 2nd Division was organized at Fort Benning, Georgia with personnel and equipment of the 10th Infantry Division.

HISTORY OF 7TH INFANTRY DIVISION

The 7th Infantry Division was organized on December 6, 1917 at Camp Wheeler in Macon, Georgia. In August 1918 the Division was sent overseas and took part in the Second Army Offensive, including the Preney Ridge attack of November 1918. The Division was then demobilized on 22 September, 1921.

The "Bayonet Division", as it is known, was reactivated again in July, 1940 at Fort Ord, California when fighting was rampant in Europe and when Pearl Harbor was attacked the Division took up defensive positions along the California coast.

Formerly a motorized division, the 7th became the 7th Infantry Division in 1942.

In April 1943 the 7th was sent to Alaska and the Aleutians and recaptured Attu and Kiska Islands. The Bayonet Division then chased the Japanese out of Kwajalein, the Marshalls, and 25 other islands in the Kwajalein Atoll.

On Easter Sunday 1945 the 7th Division landed on the west coast of Okinawa and pushed to the east coast under the heaviest funfire in the Pacific War.

Elements of the Division were among the last to leave South Korea in 1949 when defenses were turned over to the Republic of Korea. They then remained in Japan until the Inchon landing in September 1950.

When the news of the Armistice was received on 27 July 1953, the 7th Infantry Division ceased fire that night at 10: o'clock but remained in Korea and has been there until this day.

THE AFKN STORY

The American Forces Korea Network is a Radio and Television complex serving United States personnel in Korea from the Demilitarized Zone to the southern borders of the nation. The Radio Network consists of eight originating stations and nine rebroadcast stations, linked by microwave, FM or land lines. The TV Net consists of one originating station and five rebroadcast outlets. Pusan TV presently operates as an independent TV film chain but will soon be tied into the Network by microwave.

AFKN was born in the early weeks of the Korean War. During days of the Pusan Perimeter, the troops in Korea were served their radio fare from transmitters in Japan. However, soon after the Inchon landing a "Network on Wheels" was born with transmitters and studios located in mobile vans, often on the move, and often close to the front lines. For these reasons the broadcasting stations used nomadic instead of geographical identifications. Thus came into being Radio "Vagabond", "Mercury", "Kilroy", "Comet". In those days Pusan Radio had the only permanent location so it became, and still is, Radio "Homesteader".

AFKN Television had its debut with filmed shows in September 1957. Some 16 months later, studios and facilities for "live" programs were added. AFKN now produces several hours weekly of local programs: News, Musicals, Sports, Documentaries, Interviews. New equipment recently obtained and on order give AFKN-TV a growing capability for local productions.

AFKN has mobile units for both Radio and Television. Among regular remote broadcasts are Eighth Army Sports, Chapel Services, Honor Guard Ceremonies and Holiday Events. "Specials" include arrivals of dignitaries at Kimpo and Press Conferences. Radio's Mobile Van also takes to the field during military exercises and maneuvers.

Armed Forces Radio and Television Service in Los Angeles supplies AFKN and other AFRTS outlets around the world with shows taken from the US Networks and packaged from AFRTS facilities. So the serviceman overseas watches ANDY GRIFFITH, HOLLYWOOD PALACE, MEET THE PRESS, WHAT'S MY LINE, FOOTBALL GAMES et al, totaling approximately 50 hours weekly. TV is on-the-air an average of 60 hours weekly, covering all the prime viewing times.

AFKN Radio is on the air around the clock on all its outlets. Network headquarters in Seoul provides about 21 hours out of every 24. Local stations fill the remaining hours with program material designed specifically for the local audience. About half the Radio time is supplied by AFRTS-LA on disc; the remaining hours originate in Korea. Radio brings shortwave coverage of sports and other special events such as news conferences, major speeches, and space flights.

The AFKN News Center has newscasts 24 times daily on Radio, with five of them "major" or comprehensive roundups. Television has three casts daily. AP and UPI teletypes, UPI wirephotos, AP 8x10 glossies, ABC newsfilm, and products of the various Information Offices are the raw materials from which AFKN newscasts are produced.

AFKN installations in Korea number 30, including relay sites on several isolated mountains and 2 off-shore islands. AFKN is staffed by some 170 personnel, the bulk of which are Army and Air Force enlisted men. Also on the staff are six officers, an equal number of American civilians, and several Korean employees.

The basic mission of AFKN is to provide information and education to American service personnel; it serves as a Commander's voice to the troops. Although entertainment is not the primary mission of AFKN, much of the Radio and TV broadcast day is devoted to entertainment and troop morale.

Among the personalities who have appeared before AFKN cameras and microphones the past year are Vice President Humphrey, Secretary of State Rusk, Mayor Kim of Seoul, Tex Ritter, Helen Hayes, Pearl Buck, and Frank Sinatra Jr.

The American Forces Korea Network was spawned in the fire of the Korean War and has continually expanded in its 16 years of service to provide the best in programming to U.S. personnel serving along "Freedom's Frontier" in Korea.

Effective 1 September 1966

GENERAL CHARLES H. BONESTEEL III, US ARMY
