h. Religion

The present battalion chaplain, Lt. Randall S. HARRIS, CHC, USNR, reported on 30 May 1966. His first Protestant and Episcopal services were conducted at the rear CP on 5 June 1966. On 7 June he conducted Protestant services at the forward CP on Operation Reno. On 10 June a memorial service was conducted at the rear CP for PFC CORRIE and PFC KRAUSE. Protestant services were conducted on Sunday 12 June for the whole battalion, and another memorial service was held on 14 June at the CP for PFC CHATFIELD. On Sunday 19 June a Protestant service was conducted at the forward CP on Operation Dodge and an Episcopal service on 27 June. During the whole month when the battalion was operating extensively in the field 6 Protestant, 3 Episcopal, and 2 Memorial services were conducted by the battalion Chaplain. He arranged for 5 Roman Catholic Masses for battalion personnel and pastorally ministered to the whole battalion at the rear CP, and on all 4 operations in the field as well as to the Battalion wounded, and dead and sick in the field and at "A" Med.

The chaplain conducted 20 counselling sessions during the month.

2. Administration: Rotation orders still continue to arrive late in the month of rotation, necessitating additional letter writing and frequent phone calls in an attempt to fill allotted seat spaces. A new problem area has arisen with the advent of the new policy on leave for extensions overseas and extensions for specific duty assignments. Specifically, people are getting their extensions approved but not the requested assignment and great difficulty in getting the leave requested is being experienced.

SECTION VI
COMMUNICATION-ELECTRONICS

1. Significant Events:

- a. Obtainance of BA-279's remains difficult thru normal channels.
- b. Due to the cantonment requirements existing upon an infantry battalion, it is recommended that the generator allotment in the T/E table be changed to include one PU-239 in lieu of PU-348.
- c. PRC-6 are now able to go to FLSU on priority 5 in lieu of priority 2 as they are now considered combat essential.

2. New developments:

a. Introduction of the PRC-125 in Commanding Officer and Executive Officer mites. This now gives the battalion the capability to place in the field eleven PRC-25's. With one still on priority 2 requestion.

3. Problem Areas:

a. There still exists the need for a common textual shackle system between battalions and regiment.

b. Shortage of 7 radio operators in the battalion with 12 due to rotate within the next 3 months.

9. Summary of operations participated in, with problems encountered and lessons learned.

With the exception of four days the entire month of June was spent in the field on 4 operations. This has resulted in valuable experience to many of our untrained radio operators and wiremen. The biggest problem encountered was the excessive wear on the radio equipment of the battalion.

4. Problem Areas.

a. Equipment. The MRC-87 Radio jeep has been deadlined for over two weeks with engine trouble and the prospects of obtaining a replacement or getting it fixed are slight at present. BD-451/U batteries are a problem because it is impossible to keep a sufficient number charged to meet the needs of the battalion due to its heavy operational commitments.

b. Personnel. The battalion has only ten enlisted members in TACP at present, two of whom rotate in July. This is four below T/O of twelve and no relief appears to be in sight. One FAC rotates in July and the battalion ALO has orders to the Wing in August. This means that within a month replacements will be needed to keep the battalion at T/O strength in TACP officer and enlisted personnel.

SECTION XI

Problems Encountered, Lessons Learned by Supporting Arms

1. One recurring problem is that when operating in an area with an absence of prominent terrain and with a sometimes inaccurate 1:50,000 map the Artillery Forward Observer has a difficult time in accurately determining his position. However, by the use of marking rounds on a grid intersection the FO can keep track of his progress. Shell smoke, white phosphorus, or a high burst achieved by using shell HE with a time fuse, may be used for this purpose.

2. Another problem encountered on operations was a large number of stations on the Artillery Conduct of Fire Net. This problem was solved by the Artillery Battalion Fire Direction Center allotting each supported infantry battalion its own C of F Net and the FDC monitored both nets.

3. Another was the time lag involved for the Infantry Battalion FSCG to submit "Sav-A-Planes" to regiment. It was found that missions could be fired quicker if the "Sav-A-Planes" were submitted by the Battalion ALO. A more efficient method would be for the Regimental FSCG to monitor all fire missions and submit the "Sav-A-Planes".

d. Transportation to the operating area was accomplished by fixed wing aircraft and the return by helicopter shuttle.

e. Organic Communications equipment was employed exclusively and was considered adequate.

f. Medical facilities organic to the Battalion were adequate for this operation and no additional support was required.

13. Special Equipment and Techniques: No special equipment and techniques were employed

14. Commander's Analysis: Liaison with the 1st ARVN Division was smooth and effective. The ARVN's more intimate knowledge of the area and the enemy likely to be encountered was of considerable value. Civil Affairs and Psychological Warfare activities were not particularly appropriate to the mission and the operating area and were not significantly employed.

15. Recommendations: The incident of 5 June 1966 was avoidable. Personnel of all levels not familiar with local conditions should not enter insecure areas without escort. It is recommended that the two vehicle rule be reemphasized to all services concerned.

1. Returned.

2. The deficiencies noted in paragraph 12. a. of the basic correspondence stemmed from a lack of coordination between the supporting helicopter squadron and the ISA. In each instance of supplies not being delivered investigation revealed that the material was available but was delivered to the wrong position, i.e. items ordered for Company F delivered to Company H. On the third day of the operation in order to alleviate these discrepancies a sergeant from the attached HST was sent to the ISA to coordinate operations, and little or no problems were encountered after that.

 - e. Naval Gunfire. A FD was on station and utilized when required.

7. Intelligence:

It was believed VC units of platoon size were operating in the objective area prior to the operation; possibly elements of local forces Co. C117 or C118.

During the operation itself, the only thing encountered was harrasing sniper fire. From interrogation of VCS's it was learned the VC had knowledge of an operation in the area.

The terrain covered was generally flat, with rice paddies. The foliage was plentiful, giving natural cover and concealment for enemy troops. During the entire operations clear skies generally prevailed.

8. Mission:

Conduct S&D operations against VC forces in objective area.

9. Concept of Operation:

"Operation Dodge" consisted of a series of company-size movements by foot and helicopter into predetermined areas in a random manner. Any contact was to be exploited, and all units were prepared to reinforce each other on one hour notice.

Weapons: None

Equipment: 1 booby trapped 60mm mortar round, 35 rds 30 cal ammo, 2 Chi Com grenades; 1 booby trapped M-79 round, 1 gas mask, 1 camouflaged hat, 2000 lbs rice, 50 lbs corn, various documents, 1 canteen, 20 rds 45 cal ammo, 3 rds M1 ammo, 3 Chi Com cartridge cases, 1 45 cal magazine, 1 steel helmet, 1 home made booby trap, and 1 BAR magazine.

12. Administrative Matters:

- a. Supply. Supply support from LSA needed improvement. On a number of occasions the wrong items were sent out while requested items were not.
- b. Casualties: Prompt evacuation by helicopter was arranged as needed.
- c. Transportation: No problem with either the helicopter lifts or truck convoys.
- d. Communications: A RC292 and a relay station at the LSA enabled good communications to be established and maintained.

13. Special Equipment and Techniques.

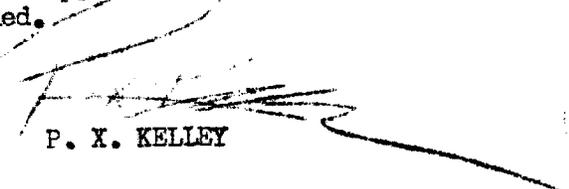

An ITT Team was colocated with the Battalion CP. VCS were apprehended by companies and evacuated to the CP, where ITT would question them. Those who had information of value were further evacuated to S-2, 4th Marines; others were turned over to National Police. The S-2, 2/4 was given a written report of the results of the interrogations and the information received.

14. Commander's Analysis.

Although enemy contact was limited, it is believed that the concept of utilizing helicopter mobility to the utmost and moving units in an unpredictable fashion is an effective method to keep the VC off-balance. Any contact made would be immediately exploited, utilizing the utmost tactical flexibility.

15. Recommendations.

That provisions be made for the Battalion Commander to have a command and control helicopter during daylight hours, and that the feasibility of having a helicopter squadron in direct support of a infantry battalion on certain types of operations be expanded.

3. Problems Encountered and Lessons Learned

(a) Communications (Conduct of Fire Net)

Two artillery batteries were designated to support two infantry battalions during this operation. Both batteries were in direct support of both infantry battalions, on one conduct of fire net and operating only one FDC. As a result, there were two liaison teams, seven FO teams and two batteries of the same conduct of fire net. This overloaded the net and as a result, delayed fire missions as long as 20 minutes. The computation of fire missions with one FDC, for both batteries, further delayed "on call" fires.

Recommendation. In this situation, one battery should be placed in direct support of one infantry battalion. Each battery would then have its own conduct of fire and operate its own SMO which would result in more responsive fires for the infantry battalion.
