PART II

NARRATIVE SUMMARY

1. General Overview of Activities. The Battalion was assigned search and destroy and security missions in three different areas of responsibility during the month of October. These areas were: Vandegrift Combat Base, Elliot Combat Base and the Khe Chia bridge. Basically the mission assigned was accomplished by maintaining one or two rifle companies in a perimeter defense at the major installations, with the remaining maneuver elements participating in Operation Georgia Tar in the assigned TAOR. Organic support units were assigned general support missions from fixed positions within the major defensive areas. Toward the end of the month the Battalion prepared for stand down and stood down at Quang Tri Combat Base, and prepared for redeployment to Okinawa. On arrival in Okinawa the Battalion commenced small unit training and rehabilitation of weapons and equipment.

2. Command Relations

a. Normal Command relations and operational control were effected by the Battalion Commander through command visits, inspections and the issuance of daily fragmentary orders.

3. Missions Assigned. From 1 - 5 October 1969 the 2d Battalion, 4th Marines was assigned the mission of providing security for Elliot Combat Base, FSB Fuller and Khe Chia Bridge. Search and destroy operations were directed in the area surrounding FSB Fuller and Elliot Combat Base. The mission was accomplished by deploying three rifle companies in TAOR's and keeping one rifle company at each FSB for security. On the afternoon of 6 October 1969 the Battalion assumed responsibility for security of Elliot Combat Base and Signal Hill, Sparrow Hawk/Bald Eagle, Regimental Reserve, reaction force for Project Delta, security for Gue Viet, a platoon with the 1st BDE, 5th INF. DIV. (Mech) at Cam Lo, and search and destroy operations throughout the entire 4th Marines TAOR. To accomplish the missions simultaneously, the Battalion assumed OPCON of rifle companies of the 3d Battalion, 4th Marines on different dates for varying lengths of time. On the 22nd the Battalion commenced stand down operations, in preparation for redeployment to Okinawa. The Battalion arrived at Okinawa on 12 November 1969.

4. Intelligence

a. Enemy. The enemy activity for the reporting period remained consistent with the tactics of the last reporting period. A limited number of contacts were initiated by the enemy; however, the enemy did continue a harassment type of tactics, employing anti-vehicular mines, demolitions and sapper attacks.

b. Weather. The weather during the first month of the 2d quarter consisted primarily of heavy rainfall. The weather during the month of November and December was cool in temperatures both day and night with frequent shower activity. The winds were predominantly from the NNE varying to NNW at 10 to 15 knots. A tropical storm entered the area at 251030Z Nov 1969 and moved back into the Pacific.

c. Terrain. Due to the area in which the Battalion was operating and the fact that it has not differed from the last reporting period, it remains the same. Basically, the AO consisted of mountainous origins with heavy foliage, naturally detrimental to aerial observation. The terrain encountered during November and December was mostly low, slightly rolling hills covered by heavy foliage, bamboo and sugar cane fields.

5. Major Operations

a. The 2d Battalion continued Operation Georgia Tar on arrival at Vandegrift Combat Base 6 October 1969. For the next 27 days the Alpha Command Group and one company deployed at Elliot Combat Base and two companies conducted search and destroy sweep to the north of Elliot Combat Base and in the surrounding mountains around Elliot Combat Base. One company was assigned to Sparrow Hawk/Bald Eagle.

8. Logistics

a. Supply. Resupply from LSA by air at Quang Tri was conducted during the period until redeployment from RVN. Additional resupply to some of the companies was also conducted by trucks. At one time this unit had the responsibility of resupplying six companies. During this period, one hot meal per day was provided to the companies at least 80% of the time that they were in the field. The major problem in providing hot chow to companies on the move was obtaining disposable food containers. Types of disposable containers used were styrofoam and 175mm metal canisters. Food placed in the 175mm canisters had plastic bag inserts. Preparation for redeployment went fairly smooth as most units returned from the field in time to prepare for embarkation and to provide working parties to clean vehicles, pack and band Battalion supplies. The agriculture and PMU inspection of equipment and supplies was satisfactory with few discrepancies. Equipment and supplies were ready for loading aboard ship as scheduled and embarkation progressed without major difficulty. During re-hab of equipment after this unit arrived in Okinawa major end items were turned in for LTI's and repair. Five 81mm mortar tubes were determined unserviceable, and new tubes placed on requisition by Third Force Service Regiment. Fourteen M 151's, twenty-two M 274's, two AN/MRC-109's and one AN/MRC-83 were coded out due to the high cost of repair on the equipment. Replacements were provided for the M 151's, the twenty-two M 274's and the two AN/MRC-109's that were coded out. Third Force Service Regiment provided good support in all aspects.
