PART II

Narrative Summary

During the month of September 1967, the major artillery effort was directed towards providing supporting fires for the defense of the Danang TAOR and in support of operations in the surrounding areas. Additionally, artillery fires were provided for teams of the 1st Reconnaissance Battalion (inserted deep into Viet Cong controlled territory), CIDG/Special Forces Camps, and elements of the 2nd ARVN Division. Operations supported during this period included: Operations YAZOO, SWIFT, BALLISTIC CHARGE and SHELBYVILLE. A total of 28,387 missions were fired and 154,653 rounds were expended during the month.

Operational highlights of the month included the development of a Counter-Rocket plan in the northern portion of the Division AO. Since September 4th, general support units have laid nightly on potential rocket launching sites in pre-cleared areas. Units are triggered to commence barrage fires immediately upon sighting rockets or receiving reported sightings from observers. The barrage fires are intended to be suppressive in nature and to continue until accurate data on the firing site location(s) is obtained. Nightly, four to twelve drills are conducted by the Regimental FDC; the drills have served to increase the responsiveness of general support fires while delivering harrassing and interdictory fires in possible launch areas.

The foregoing plan was primarily stimulated by a new technique employed by enemy rocket units in the Danang area on 2 September 1967. On that date, the enemy delivered simultaneous rocket attacks from three widely seperated locations. Targets included the Danang Airfield, the Force Logistic Command, and the 8" artillery complex in the northern part of the Division area of operations (artillery casualties were light; 3 WIA, 2 trucks destroyed and 1 building damaged). The three pronged attack resulted in a plethora of target information at the FDCs tended to slow artillery reaction time. Although one site was identified and taken under fire within five minutes, the other two sites were not accurately located for about five minutes and, with time required for clearance, were not fired upon until about 11 minutes had elapsed. The current counter-rocket plan provides for suppressive fires on deep rocket site targets while FDCs concentrate on locating the unit firing into the vital area.

During the month, Armed Reconnaissance Over-flights of the rocket belt were continued at the rate of three (3) flights per day, weather and aircraft availability permitting.

On 25 September 1967, Battery B, 8th Battalion, 4th Artillery, US Army was consolidated into position (grid AT 985675) in order to increase the speed and volume of fires available for Recon inserts and to simplify logistics.

On 19 September 1967, Major General Charles P. BROWN, USA, Commanding General, U.S. Army Artillery and Missile Command, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, visited the Regiment to assess artillery training needs and the quality of the Fort Sill product.

As the month drew to a close, the 11th Marines were in receipt of orders requiring the displacement of the 1st Battalion (-), 11th Marines to QUANG TRI for support of the 1st Marines (-) also scheduled for movement. The 2d Battalion (-), 11th Marines were scheduled to displace northward in the Division AO to occupy positions to be vacated by 1st Battalion, 11th Marines.

This course of instruction lasted twenty (20) days and will continue on a monthly basis until all personnel in the occupational field of 0842 and 5931 have had the refresher training. Extensive training on the M-16 rifle was continued throughout the Regiment. Forward observer training of non-artillery personnel was held one day a week throughout the month for units within the 1st Marine Division. A total of 87 students were trained, each receiving two (2) hours of classroom instructions and four (4) hours of practical application in adjusting artillery fire. Officer and Staff NCO classes were conducted throughout the month within the Regiment. A school on Embarkation was conducted by Division for eight (8) members of this Command.

5. Logistics. Receipt of obturator spindles and pads from Army and Marine Corps sources eliminated the major cause of deadlining of M109's. Receipt of 155mm gun barrels (3d echelon item) eliminated immediate problem causing deadline of M53's. Shortage of repair parts for motor vehicles and artillery weapons continues to exist.
