6. Intelligence

a. Enemy action during Operation GEMSTONE was characterized by the increased use of artillery and mortars against the coastal outposts of Gio Linh and Con Thien during daylight hours. Heavy daylight shelling represented a change in enemy tactics. During May, 12th Marines counter-battery fire was very effective during the hours of darkness. The enemy countered by shifting to an increased amount of artillery and mortar attacks during daylight hours. It appears the enemy took this course of action to reduce the surveillance opportunity provided us by their gun flashes at night. The Qui Viet River facility received a 122/140mm rocket attack on 11 June. This was the only time the enemy employed rockets during Operation CUMARRON. Twelfth Marines artillery, reinforced by naval gunfire, fired 776 missions on suspected artillery positions, 129 missions on active artillery positions, 48 missions on suspected mortar positions, and 34 missions on active mortar positions. In addition, 446 missions were fired on suspected AA positions, 40 missions were fired on active AA positions, 106 missions were fired on rocket positions, and 7 missions were fired on SAM sites. The most significant increase in the above number of missions fired was the 129 missions fired on active artillery positions. There were also a marked increase of AA/AV fire in the DMZ area against both light observation and jet aircraft. The increase in the missions fired on active artillery accompanied by the increased AA fire, indicates that the enemy is employing and is prepared to protect a greater number of artillery pieces in the DMZ area, either for support of future ground action in the southern DMZ or to provide themselves an increased capability for inflicting casualties in our rear areas as well as on our forward elements.

Despite the fact that increased AA fire limited aerial observation north of the Ben Hai River, between 150 and 200 prepared artillery positions were identified in the DMZ and North Vietnam by III MAF photo interpretation, counter-mortar radar (AN/MPQ-4A) located at Gio Linh, Flash OP's located at Gio Linh and Con Thien, and aerial observers. Recent sightings by aerial observers indicate that the artillery positions are well dug in with heavy overhead cover. The large number of missions fired against these well prepared positions has undoubtedly restricted but not materially reduced the enemy's M&I program against Con Thien and Gio Linh. It is evident that heavy air strikes with large delay fuze bombs will be required to actually destroy the majority of such artillery positions. Friendly artillery must continue to be employed to suppress and restrict the enemy artillery fire, and to provide flak suppression fires in support of air strikes.

b. See 3d Marine Division and Operation CUMARRON Intsums for NVA/VC strength, current situation, unit identification, and other intelligence.

c. Characteristics of area of operation

(1) The weather was normal for the area, temperature average was 90-95°; relative humidity 70-75%; wind velocity 10 to 15 knots, gusting to 40 knots during the last week of June. Precipitation was less than 3 inches. The gusting winds had an adverse affect on the launching of light observation aircraft.

(2) Terrain varies from sparsely populated villages and flat rice paddies on the coast to rolling foothills in the western portion of the operating area. Heavily bunkered defensive positions were encountered throughout the DMZ area and particularly in the dense foliage of the foothills. Most friendly movements were confined to the use of trails.

7. Mission. 12th Marines (-)(Rain) to provide direct support to infantry regiments and general support/general support reinforcing fires as required within and on the periphery of the area of operations; to maintain FSCC at Dong Ha Combat Base for overall coordination of supporting arms (including NGF) and direct liaison with DASC thereat; to continue to maintain the Gio Linh artillery outpost primarily for Operation HIGHERISE (firing into DMZ/NVA); to provide artillery support of reconnaissance operations as required; to provide artillery coverage of rough rider convoy operations as required; and to effect redistribution of artillery units as required to provide optimum support of units involved in Operation CIMARRON.

8. Concept of Artillery Employment

a. General. Artillery support to be provided for U.S. and ARVN/RF-PF forces in that portion of Quang Tri Province affected by Operation CIMARRON, while retaining the capability for rapid deployment of artillery assets to increase level of support of infantry operations being conducted elsewhere in the 3d Marine Division area of operations. Such artillery support to be provided from existing division artillery assets as reinforced by light, medium, and heavy self-propelled artillery weapons. Assets to be task organized and deployed in a mixture of types and calibers so as to afford optimum mutual support between artillery locations, maximum capability for the massing of fires within and external to the area of operations, and concurrent provision of both close and deep supporting fires from any given artillery position or complex of weapons.

b. Direct support of infantry operations to be accomplished by provision of a reinforced direct support artillery battalion to each of the two infantry regiments. These battalions to be located at the Camp Carroll/Thon Son Lan and the Dong Ha/Con Thien/Cam Lo/ Truc Khe complexes.

c. General support reinforcing fires to be provided by type artillery units located as follows:

- (1) One 175mm gun battery in the Gio Linh/Truc Khe area
- (2) Two 175mm gun batteries (minus 2 weapons) at Camp Carroll
- (3) One 175mm platoon (2 guns) at Thon Son Lan
- (4) One 8" howitzer battery (minus 2 weapons) at Cam Lo
- (5) One 105mm SP howitzer battery at Dong Ha

d. At the Gio Linh Artillery outpost:

- (a) One 105mm SP howitzer battery
- (b) One 8" howitzer platoon (2 weapons)
- (c) One 155mm SP howitzer platoon (2 weapons)
- (d) One 90mm Tank platoon (5 tanks)

d. Disposition of artillery units and calibers to be such as to permit concurrent provision of:

- (1) Long range support of deep reconnaissance efforts, primarily by 175mm guns.

- (2) Long range heavy neutralization, destruction, harassing, and interdiction fires, particularly in the DMZ and NVN, and primarily by 175mm guns and 8" howitzer.

CONFIDENTIAL

(3) Short and medium range support of reconnaissance and position security efforts, primarily by 105mm and 155mm howitzers.

(4) Counter-mortar/artillery/rocket fires in defense of fixed positions and installations, primarily by 105mm howitzers.

e. To improve and refine techniques for target acquisition, target surveillance, and adjustment of fires to enhance the artillery support of friendly infantry operations, and to counter the enemy's artillery/mortar/rocket capabilities.

9. Execution

a. General. Artillery support of Operation CILARRON was provided essentially as outlined in the Concept of Artillery Employment set forth herein.

(1) The only significant alteration in tactics occurred in the operations of the Composite Artillery Battalion at Gio Linh. By direction of this Headquarters, artillery elements of the Battalion were moved out of the Gio Linh position on an echelon basis during daylight hours to avoid the harassment and casualty producing effects of enemy artillery fire. A significant reduction in personnel and equipment losses resulted from this tactic, without any attendant depreciation in the mission accomplishment of the Composite Artillery Battalion.

(2) Although executed and reported as a separate artillery operation, Operation HIGERISE provided depth of artillery support for Operation CILARRON.

(3) Surveillance on observed missions was obtained from the forward observers, aerial observers, and recon teams conducting the missions. Surveillance on unobserved missions, when possible, was obtained through battle damage assessment from aerial observers, aerial photo interpretation reports from III MAF, ground sweeps through the target area, and agent reports.

b. Target acquisition was obtained through forward and aerial observer contacts, ~~visual~~ reconnaissance, and photo interpretation reports from III MAF. The most significant enemy artillery position areas were detected through counter-mortar radar and flash base OP techniques.

c. Technical accuracy in firing was enhanced through:

(1) Conduct of 72 precision, high burst, and counter-mortar radar registrations within the Operation CILARRON area.

(2) Completion of the following survey improvements within the Operation CILARRON area:

- (a) 4th Order SCP's established/re-established:
 - (1) 1 Con Thien area

CONFIDENTIAL

- (2) 8 Rock Pile area
- (3) 2 Nail Lee area
- (4) 6 Camp Carroll
- (5) 4 Can Lo area
- (6) 9 between Dong Ha and Gio Linh
- (7) 3 Dong Ha area
- (8) 7 Quang Tri area
- (9) 5 Cua Viet area

(b) Battery centers established:

- (1) 4 Gio Linh area

d. Enclosure (1) is a narrative statement of events which occurred during Operation CINHARRON.

e. Enclosure (2) is a recapitulation of missions fired and ammunition expended in support of Operation CINHARRON.

11. Administrative Matters. No administrative plan was published for the operation; however, logistical functions were performed on a day-to-day basis in accordance with standing division operating procedures and in response to each specific situation as it developed.

a. Supply. Stock levels of all classes of supply were maintained at satisfactory level with two exceptions: Class II consumables for the support of the Meteorological section; and Class IV items such as 5 and 8 foot engineer stakes and sandbags.

b. Maintenance. Generally, a satisfactory level of maintenance was attained. An overall Regimental average of 13% was experienced for motor transport equipment and 3% for ordnance. However, in the area of engineer equipment, namely tractors TD 15 and 18, an unsatisfactory level of 60% deadline was experienced. The 3% ordnance deadline rate compared favorably with the 4% reported for Operation PRAIRIE IV. This was largely due to the increased availability of major replacement components for the 105mm howitzers. Serious problems still exist in the availability of repair parts for the less common M-109 and M-55 self-propelled howitzers.

c. Treatment of casualties, evacuation and hospitalization. Treatment of casualties is considered to have been adequate at all command levels, despite an austere level of medical supplies.

d. Transportation. A total of 657 vehicles were on hand with which all of the Regimental requirements, except one, were handled. The one exception was the movement of tractors via non-organic low bed trailers. Support in this area remained unsatisfactory.

e. Communications. Communications support for Operation CIMARRON remained essentially the same as established for PRAIRIE IV. Commitments requiring equipment in excess of the T/E continue to be a major problem.

(1) Wire and Radio Relay

(a) Only minor changes were made in wire communications for Operation CIMARRON. No additional trunk lines or radio relay installations were required.

(b) The radio relay channels between the 12th Marines and the Composite Artillery Battalion at Gio Linh experienced some outages due to enemy action, but generally offered acceptable communications. Radio relay equipment losses at Gio Linh have reduced our capability to the bare minimum.

CONFIDENTIAL

required for one eight-channel link.

(2) Radio

(a) Radio continued to be the primary means of communication. During periods of radio relay outages, all nets were heavily burdened with operational and administrative traffic.

(b) The KY-8 cipher equipment was used with increasing frequency and reliability. Some outages were experienced due to defective power cables.

(3) Supply and Maintenance

(a) Unacceptably long delays continue to be experienced when equipment is turned in for 3rd echelon repair. During this period, the 12th Marines Message Center was without a teletype tape transmission capability. The required equipment has been in maintenance for three months.

(b) Some supply shortages were experienced in repair parts and operational accessories for radio and wire equipment.

f. Medical Evaluation. Overall medical support was satisfactory; however, a potential problem area exists in the decreasing availability of medical supplies.

12 Special Equipment and Techniques.

a. Continued use of Countermortar Radar equipment, installed during Operation PRAIRIE IV, contributed significantly to the overall counter-mortar/artillery/rocket program.

b. The operational effect of attaching the First Searchlight Battery, FMF, to the 12th Marines has not yet been determined since the attachment occurred late in Operation CHAMPION.

Chronology of Eventsa. Operational Highlights

(1) During Operation CUMMISON, several displacements of artillery units were necessitated to better support the tactical situation and influence the action:

(a) On 3 June, I/3/12 displaced from Dong Ha to Camp Carroll and C/1/12 displaced from Con Thien to Camp Carroll. Both were assigned OPCON to 1/12 for support of the Third Marines. B/1/12 displaced from Camp Carroll to Can Lo and E/2/12 displaced from Co-Bi-Thanh-Tan to Con Thien. Both were assigned OPCON to 2/12 for support of the Ninth Marines. K/4/13 displaced from Con Thien to Dong Ha and remained OPCON to 2/12 in support of the Ninth Marines. B/1/13 displaced from Con Thien to Dong Ha enroute to Phu Bai.

(b) On 5 June, C/1/40 displaced from Can Lo to Dong Ha and D/2/12 displaced from Gio Linh to Dong Ha for support of the Dong Ha Combat Base. A/1/40 displaced from Dong Ha to Gio Linh for support of Gio Linh Combat Outposts. On 7 June, the 1st Platoon, 1st Armored Amphibian Company was relieved on position at the Cua Viet River Facility by the 3rd Platoon, 1st Armored Amphibian Company. On 12 June, B/6/27 displaced from Dong Ha to Camp Carroll, and on 13 June, B/2/94 displaced two guns from Camp Carroll to Thon Son Lam to support recon operations to the west.

(c) On 14 June, F/2/12 displaced from Khe Sanh to Can Lo and was assigned OPCON to 2/12 for support of the Ninth Marines. On 19 June, D/2/12 displaced from Dong Ha to Truc Khe and remained OPCON to 2/12 for support of the Ninth Marines. In support of Operation HIGHRISE, and general support of Operation CUMMISON, K/4/13 displaced two howitzers from Dong Ha to Gio Linh, and 1st 8" How Btry displaced two howitzers from Can Lo to Gio Linh, on 19 and 23 June, respectively.

5. Supporting Forces. Not Applicable

6. Intelligence

a. During Operation BUFFALO the enemy demonstrated the ability to mass his artillery in support of a ground attack. On 2 July the enemy launched a regimental size ground attack against friendly forces northeast of Con Thien supported by a heavy rocket and artillery barrage fired from batteries located in the northern DMZ and North Vietnam. Never before had the enemy exposed so many artillery and rocket positions during daylight hours. It is assumed from the disposition of the ground troops, the volume of fire support and the artillery and rocket attacks on Dong Ha from 2 July to 10 July, that the enemy had planned in detail to attack the Con Thien Outpost.

An effective tactic employed by the enemy for the first time during Operation BUFFALO was the employment of daytime artillery H&I fires against Dong Ha Combat Base. At 1650 hours on 4 July the first daytime H&Is were fired on Dong Ha from two heavy artillery weapons located south of the DMZ.

UNCLASSIFIED

CONFIDENTIAL

This attack was followed by a similar attack on 5 July at 1750 hours. Flash base observation posts successfully located the enemy artillery firing on Dong Ha. The positions were confirmed by C&R, crater analysis, and Air Observers. The fragments recovered from the crater analysis indicated that the weapon was heavy caliber, possible 130mm or larger.

On 6 July enemy artillery fired a three hour barrage at friendly ground forces in the southern DMZ from positions in the northern DMZ and North Vietnam. Again the enemy exposed numerous artillery and rocket positions. These exposed positions were attacked by massive counterbattery fire and air strikes. On the same day, 6 July, Dong Ha was hit with H&I fires from south of the DMZ at 1730 hours. On the night of 6 July the enemy launched eight SAMs at attacking aircraft. Four artillery missions were fired on these launch sites.

The enemy H&I program continued until 10 July. At 0150 hours on 10 July the enemy launched a 140mm rocket attack on Dong Ha. This attack marked the end of significant enemy artillery and rocket activity during Operation BUFFALO.

Conventional AA fire was also heavy during the early part of BUFFALO. For the first time 37mm and 57mm AA weapons were fired at light observation and jet aircraft operating south of the Ben Hai River. Sixty two counterflakmissions were fired at active AA positions during Operation BUFFALO.

Counterbattery fires during the period consisted of three hundred sixty-five (365) missions against active artillery positions and one hundred sixty-eight (168) against suspect artillery positions.

b. Enemy Situation. 3d Marine Division Intsuns for period.

c. Characteristics of area of operation

(1) The weather was normal for the area, temperature average was 90-95° relative humidity 70-75%; wind velocity 10 to 15 knots. Precipitation was less than 3 inches.

(2) Terrain varied from sparsely populated villages and flat rice paddies on the coast to rolling foothills in the western portion of the operating area. Heavily bunkered defensive positions were encountered throughout the area and particularly in the dense foliage of the foothills.

7. Mission. 12th Marines (-)(Rein) to provide direct support to the infantry regiments and general support/general support reinforcing fires as required within and on the periphery of the area of operations; to maintain the FSCC at Dong Ha Combat Base for overall coordination of supporting arms and direct liaison with the DASC; to continue to maintain the Gio Linh artillery outpost primarily for Operation Highrise (firing into the DMZ/AVN); to provide artillery support of reconnaissance operations as required; to provide artillery coverage of rough rider convoy operations as required; and to effect redistribution of artillery units as required to provide support of units involved in Operation BUFFALO.

UNCLASSIFIED

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~8. Concept of Artillery Employment

a. General. Artillery support to be provided for U.S. and ARVN/RF-PF forces in that portion of Quang Tri Province affected by Operation BUFFALO while retaining the capability for rapid deployment of artillery assets to increase the level of support of infantry operations being conducted elsewhere in the 3d Marine Division area of operations. Such artillery support to be provided from existing division artillery assets as reinforced by light, medium, and heavy self-propelled artillery weapons. Assets to be task organized and deployed in a mixture of types and calibers to afford optimum mutual support between artillery locations, maximum capability for the massing of fires within and external to the area of operations, and concurrent provision of both close and deep supporting fires from any given artillery position or complex of weapons.

b. Direct support of infantry operations to be accomplished by provision of a reinforced direct support artillery battalion to each of the two infantry regiments. These battalions to be located at the Camp Carroll/Thon Son Lam and the Dong Ha/Con Thien/Cam Lo/Truc Khe complexes.

c. General support/general support reinforcing fires to be provided by type artillery units located as follows:

- (1) One 175mm gun battery in Truc Khe.
- (2) Two 175mm gun batteries (minus 2 weapons) at Camp Carroll.
- (3) One 175mm gun platoon (2 guns) at Thon Son Lam.
- (4) One 8" Howitzer battery (minus 2 weapons) at Cam Lo.
- (5) One 105mm SP howitzer battery at Dong Ha.
- (6) At the Gio Linh Artillery Outpost:
 - (a) One 105mm SP howitzer battery.
 - (b) One 8" howitzer platoon (2 weapons).
 - (c) One 155mm SP howitzer platoon (2 weapons).
 - (d) One 90mm tank platoon (5 tanks).

d. Disposition of artillery units and calibers to be such as to permit concurrent provision of:

- (1) Long range support of deep reconnaissance efforts, primarily by 175mm guns and NGF.
- (2) Long range heavy neutralization, destruction, harassing and interdiction fires, particularly in the DMZ and NVN, and primarily by 175mm guns, 8" howitzers, and NGF.

(3) Short and medium range support of reconnaissance and position security efforts, primarily by 105mm and 155mm howitzers.

e. To improve and refine techniques for target acquisition, target surveillance, and adjustment of fires to enhance the artillery support of infantry operations and to counter the enemy's artillery/rocket/mortar capabilities.

9. Execution

a. General. Artillery support of Operation BUFFALO was provided as outlined in the concept of Artillery Employment set forth herein.

(1) Although executed and reported as a separate artillery operation, Operation HIGHRISE provided depth of artillery support for Operation BUFFALO.

(2) Surveillance on observed missions was obtained from the forward observers, aerial observers, and recon teams conducting the missions. Surveillance on unobserved missions, when possible, was obtained through battle damage assessment from aerial observers, aerial photo interpretation reports from III MAF, ground sweeps through the target area, and agent reports.

b. Target acquisition was obtained through forward and aerial observer contacts, visual reconnaissance, and photo interpretation reports from III MAF. The most significant enemy artillery position locations are as were detected through countermortar radar and flash base GP techniques. There was also a significant increase in the location of enemy artillery positions by aerial observers.

c. Technical accuracy in firing was enhanced through the conduct of 21 precision, high burst, and countermortar radar registrations within the Operation BUFFALO area.

10. Results

a. Total 12th Marine losses were as follows:

(1) Personnel

USMC	KIA	WIA	OFF	DOW	MIA	KIA	WIA	ENL	DOW	MIA
	1	2		0	0	14	22		0	0

USA	KIA	WIA	OFF	DOW	MIA	KIA	WIA	ENL	DOW	MIA

(2) Material. The following is a listing of end items destroyed by enemy action and declared as combat loss:

11. Administrative matters. Logistics planning in general was adequate. There was no specific logistics planning as regards to artillery units, however, the already existing logistics system functioned to support all requirements on an as required basis.

a. Supply. Stock levels of all classes of supply were maintained at satisfactory levels, with two exceptions: Class II consumable for the support of the Meteorological section, and Class IV items such as 5 and 8 foot engineer stakes and sandbags.

b. Maintenance. Generally a satisfactory level of maintenance was attained. An overall Regimental average of 13% was experienced for motor transport equipment and 3% for ordnance. However, in the area of engineer equipment, namely tractors TD 15 and 18, an unsatisfactory level of 60% deadlined was experienced. The 3% ordnance deadline rate compared favorably with the 4% reported for Operation CLIMAX. This was largely due to the increased availability of major replacement components for the 105mm Howitzers. Serious problems still exist in the availability of repair parts for the less common M109 and M55 self-propelled howitzers.

c. Treatment of Casualties, Evacuation and Hospitalization. Treatment of casualties is considered to have been adequate at all command levels, despite an austere level of medical supplies.

d. Transportation. A total of 657 vehicles were on hand with which all of the Regimental requirements, except one, were handled. The one exception being the movement of tractors via non-organic low bed trailers. Support in this area remained unsatisfactory.

e. Communications

(1) General. Communications support for Operation BUFFALO necessitated some changes affecting previously established facilities. Requirements for radios on patrols, ambushes, sector security nets and civil affairs again pointed out the need for an equipment addition to the T/E.

(2) Wire and Radio Relay.

(a) Major changes were made in the wire installations serving this command. The "Shove Switch" took over operation of almost all trunks and many of the Regimental CP locals. Service obtained from "Shove Switch" was unacceptable during most of the operation.

(b) Enemy action resulted in the loss of three underground cables and a construction site. A major portion of subscriber service was restored on the following day and full service was restored on the second day.

(c) Radio Relay capabilities were reduced to four channels between this Headquarters and the Composite Artillery Battalion at Gio Linh, due to problems with one multiplexing unit.

UNCLASSIFIED

CONFIDENTIAL

(3) Radio

(a) KY-8 cypher equipment installation was improved at Gio Linh to the extent that a technician should no longer be required to remain with that facility.

(b) Radio continued to effectively bear the burden of tactical communications.

(4) Supply and Maintenance

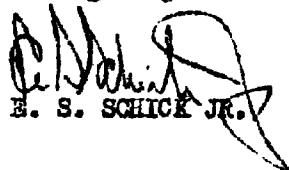

(a) The teletype circuit to 3d Marine Division continues to operate without a tape cutting or tape transmission capability. This command's AN/GCC-3 has been in third echelon repair for a period of four months.

(b) Some supply shortages were experienced with repair parts and operating accessories for radio, wire and radio relay equipment.

12. Special Equipment and Techniques

(a) Continued use of Countermortar radar equipment installed during Operation Prairie IV, contributed significantly to the overall countermortar/artillery/rocket program.

(b) During Operation BUFFALO the Searchlight Battery employed lights at Cua Viet, Gio Linh, Con Thien, Cam Lo, Dong Ha, and Camp Carroll. Several sightings were made but no significant sightings were reported.

Chronology of Events

a. Operational Highlights. During Operation BUFFALO, several displacements of artillery units were necessitated to better support the tactical situation and influence the action:

(1) On 3 July, A/1/12 came ashore from the SLF and displaced to Dong Ha, Opcon to 2/12, in support of the Ninth Marines.

(2) On 4 July, 1/3/12 displaced from Camp Carroll to Can Lo remaining Opcon to 1/12 in support of the Third Marines. A/1/12 displaced from Dong Ha to Con Thien, Opcon to 1/12, in support of the Third Marines.

(3) On 5 July, B/1/12 came ashore from the SLF and displaced to Can Lo, Opcon to 1/12 in support of the Third Marines. 1/3/12 displaced from Can Lo to Camp Carroll remaining Opcon to 1/12 in support of the Third Marines. A/1/40 displaced from Gio Linh to Dong Ha, Opcon to 1/40, in general support. C/1/40 displaced from Dong Ha to Gio Linh, Opcon to Composite Artillery Battalion, in general support of Operations BUFFALO and HIGHRISE.

(4) On 7 July, Mortar Battery 2/12 came ashore from the SLF and displaced to Dong Ha, Opcon to 2/12, in defensive support of Dong Ha Combat Base.

(5) On 13 July, Mortar Battery 2/12 displaced from Dong Ha to Can Lo, remaining Opcon to 2/12 in support of the Ninth Marines.
