COMMAND CHRONOLOGY FEBRUARY

Daily summary of events

SECRET

1 February

The month began with the Provisional Artillery Group ashore in southern Quang Ngai Province in support of Task Force Delta units conducting Operation Double Eagle. The Group Headquarters, Battery "M" (-), one platoon of LVTH 6, the Third 155 Gun (-), and the 107mm Mortar Btry 1/12 (-), were collocated at the northwest corner of the Beach Support Area vicinity (49PBS 825427). The LVTH-6 platoon answered calls of fire directly for Third Battalion, First Marines. The remaining firing batteries were in general support of Task Force Delta units.

Battery "H" 3/11 was located in a forward position in the vicinity of (49PBS 715425) from which it directly answered calls for fire from Second Battalion, Third Marines; Second Battalion, Fourth Marines; and Second Battalion, Ninth Marines units operating within their range in the mountains.

Battery H/3/12 continued to operate from its position in the US ARMY Special Forces camp at Ba To (49PBS 567323). From there they furnished fire support for deep reconnaissance units and those units of Second Battalion, Fourth Marines within their range.

No significant targets of opportunity were fired upon. Three illumination missions were fired. Registrations were conducted using counter mortar radar, impact, center of impact, and high burst methods.

2 February

Operation Double Eagle continued with the Group in support of Task Force Delta. From their forward position Battery H/3/11 expended 31 rounds on six VC carrying packs and rifles. The observer reported a possible four KIA's.

An Army aerial observer received fire from three automatic weapons. The LVTH-6 platoon reinforced by Battery "M" fired 29 rounds silencing all guns and destroying one emplacement.

At Ba To Battery "H" 3/12 fired at VC snipers causing the sniping to cease.

During the afternoon the 107mm Mortar Battery 1/12 was displaced onto the beach vicinity (49PBS 835422) from where it could provide better artillery support for the Beach Support Area.

3 February

Change in the infantry's schemes resulted in several large changes and displacements of the supporting artillery. Second Battalion, Fourth Marines moved south out of range of Battery H/3/11 and Battery H/3/12. Battery M was directed to answer their calls for fire directly.

During the morning the LVTM-6 and 155 Guns were displaced and loaded on amphibious shipping along with a command group from the Provisional Artillery Group Headquarters. These units, forming the Provisional Battery Group were landed in the afternoon and went into position vicinity (49PBS 925275) at 1508H. From this position they provided support for the Third Battalion, First Marines, and Second Battalion, Third Marines.

Battery H/3/11 remained in its position and continued to provide support for Second Battalion, Ninth Marines and rear echelons of Second Battalion, Ninth Marines and Second Battalion, Third Marines, and Second Battalion, Fourth Marines.

During the night of 2-3 February communication problems with the infantry units located in the mountains required an aerial observer be on station throughout the night for radio relay.

Battery H/3/11 fired 30 rounds on a Mortar position reported by recon. The mortars were silenced.

Fourteen rounds were fired upon a VC company reported by ARVN forces. No surveillance was available.

Battery H/3/12 took a VC ambush site reported by Recon units under fire. Eighty-one rounds were expended, saturating the target. No other surveillance was available.

Seven illumination missions were fired to illuminate the infantry perimeters.

4 February

The Provisional Battery Group took over the support of Second Battalion, Fourth Marines as it moved further south. Battery M/4/11 was relieved of answering calls directly for them and remained in general support of Task Force Delta units around the Beach Support Area.

An aerial observer was on station all night to provide radio relay between Group Headquarters, the Provisional Group and Second Battalion, Fourth Marines.

During the middle of the morning the 107mm Mortar Battery, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines came ashore and moved into position beside the 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines vicinity (49PBS 838421). They were given the mission of general support of the Beach Support Area. They had six howitzers. The 107mm Mortar Battery 1st Battalion, 12th Marines, with its four base plate mortars, and three howitzers of Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines, were alerted for a possible hoist-lift with Second Battalion, Ninth Marines.

Three Howitzers from Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines were hoist-lifted into Battery M, 4th Battalion, 11th Marines position. They were placed under OPCON of Battery M, 4th Battalion, 11th Marines. Lift was complete just prior to dark.

ARVN units moved their operations within range of the artillery located at the Beach Support Area. Eight fire missions were fired for them using USMC forward observers operating with the ARVN forces.

Battery M fired on a VC bunker. The air observer reported three KIA's.

Battery M fired on VC in a village. The air observer reported one WIA and two structures destroyed.

Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines fired on fifteen VC in a house. No casualty report was available.

5 February

At first light the Provisional Battery Group back loaded onto LCU's for displacement south. The LVTH-6 platoon went ashore again during the morning. In the early afternoon the Provisional Battery Group was ashore and operating in the vicinity of (49PBS 924187). They continued to provide artillery support for Third Battalion, First Marines; Second Battalion, Third Marines; and Second Battalion, Fourth Marines.

During the night probing occurred on the flank of the artillery units located in the Beach Support Area. No casualties occurred.

The forward half of Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines and the 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines continued to stand-by for displacement by helicopter.

Missions were fired against a machine gun, snipers, a suspected ambush, and a suspected position. All missions had good effect on targets, but no surveillances were given.

6 February

The Provisional Artillery Group continued in support of Task Force Delta and ARVN units. No displacements were made or changes in supporting roles. However, the 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines and the forward half of Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines remained on alert for a helo-lift in support of Second Battalion, Ninth Marines.

During the late evening the Provisional Battery Group received small arms fire. Fire was returned; one VC was captured and another possible wounded.

The Group Survey Section observed a group of VC holding a meeting. A fire mission was conducted. The meeting house was destroyed and the observer reported four possible KIA's.

During the morning Battery M fired a prep fire for the ARVN forces. The troops reported a confirmed two KIA's and one machine gun captured.

Another mission was fired on ten to twenty VC in the open. They were dispersed, but no KIA's were observed.

An unobserved fire-for-effect mission was fired on a suspected VC battalion by the ARVN. No surveillance was obtained.

7 February

The plan to helo-lift the 107mm Mortar Battery and the forward half of Battery H south with Second Battalion, Ninth Marines were revised. The forward half of Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines was brought back to the Beach Support Area in the afternoon. The entire battery was in place as a unit located at (49PBS 82624244).

The 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines prepared to helo-lift south with the 2nd Battalion, Ninth Marines. During the morning the Battery packed up; the battery commander went south with the infantry. For the remainder of the day the battery remained on call until their new position was determined and secured.

During the night three illumination missions were fired in support of the Beach Support Area's local security.

Missions were fired in support of ARVN forces on such targets as a VC squad, unknown number of VC, blocking fires, and even a reported VC company. No surveillance was given other than the usual good effect on target.

A sniper in the vicinity of Beach Support Area was taken under fire by a 155mm Howitzer. The sniper's fire line position was covered with fire, but no further surveillance was possible.

8 February

At dusk the 107mm Mortar Battery was displaced south and put under the operational control of 2nd Battalion, Ninth Marines. They were initially dropped into grid square (BS 7317). First thing in the morning they were repositioned at (49PBS 72601686). One mortar was put out of action when it was dropped during the second helo-lift.

During the night movement was reported in front of the Provisional Artillery Group's perimeter. The area was taken under fire with a .50 caliber machine gun.

Battery Mike and Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines took a VC village with tunnels and caves under fire at the request of the ARVN. The surveillance indicated four KIA's and 4 WIA's. In addition forty block type houses were destroyed.

In addition, a VC platoon was reported by the ARVN and taken under fire. No surveillance was given. A prep fire for the ARVN was fired in the morning, destroying twenty structures.

Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines at Ba To, fired two missions for Recon, dispersing small groups of VC. Another mission for Recon was fired upon thirty VC in mass. Two KIA's and five WIA's were confirmed. A fire mission was fired on two VC with packs; both were killed.

9 February

The Provisional Artillery Group continued its support of Task Force Delta and ARVN forces. No changes were made in its missions or its supporting roles.

During the evening three missions were fired for the ARVN forces at snipers.

During the day a heavy amount of fire was done, primarily for ARVN units operating northwest of the Beach Support Area. In the morning thirty-five rounds were expended as VC harassing fires. Twelve VC KIA's were obtained. Fire-for-effect missions were fired on such targets as a VC squad, assembly area, and prep fires.

Shortly after noon twenty-six rounds of smoke and white phosphorus rounds were fired to screen the insertion of an infantry company which went in to extract a squad trapped across the river approximately 1000 meters in front of the Beach Support Area. The smoke screen was successful.

Later in the afternoon Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines fired ninety-five rounds at VC in a tree line which were engaged with the infantry company which had crossed the river at noon. The infantry reported that although no casualties could be confirmed the firing was excellent and proved to be of great assistance to them.

Other missions were fired by Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines which took eight VC crossing a river under fire and the LVTH-6 platoon which fired at snipers. No surveillances were given.

During the afternoon the ARVN reported that a bunker was located vicinity (49PES 808421). It was taken under direct fire with a 155mm Howitzer. When high explosive shells with quick and delay firing had no effect on the bunker the mission was turned over to a tank which destroyed the bunker.

10 February

Late in the morning the 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines, was released from the operational control of Second Battalion, Ninth Marines and commenced to heli-lift back to the Beach Support Area. By mid-afternoon the entire battery was laid and ready to fire from its position at (49PBS 839421). They went back to their previously assigned mission of providing support for the Beach Support Area.

Just before dusk on 9 February, Battery H fired forty smoke rounds to cover the infantry company recrossing the river back to the Beach Support Area. The infantry reported the screen was excellent and greatly aided their crossing. At the same time the smoke screen was being fired Battery M and Battery H received approximately twenty-five rounds of incoming small arms fire. No casualties were taken.

Early in the morning the 107mm Mortar Battery, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines, and Battery M fired on forty VC in the open. No surveillance was given. Other missions were fired on such targets as an observation post, and troops firing small arms. No casualties known.

11 February

No changes were made in the location or supporting roles of the Provisional Artillery Group's units. Artillery firing was at the lowest point since the commencing of Operation Double Eagle.

During the evening the 107mm Mortar Battery, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines fired on ten VC in a meeting house. The observer with the ARVN reported three direct hits on the house, however no further surveillances were given.

Several other missions were fired, mostly for ARVN forces on suspected VC locations. Late in the afternoon three blocking fires were adjusted in for the ARVN in anticipation of a village sweep.

12 February

At the onset of the reporting period on the evening of 11 February, the ARVN Forces began sweeping the village for which blocking fires had been adjusted in earlier. When the sweep began fifty to one hundred VC fled from the village into a fire line where the blocking fires were planned. The artillery fires were called for. For a two hour period Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines and Battery M, 4th Battalion, 11th Marines fired and refired into the area. Initially the ARVN reported "many KIA's". An on-the-spot surveillance of six confirmed KIA's was given. One American observer reported seeing ten VC fall and be carried off prior to reaching the concealment of the tree line. The tree line was thoroughly covered with fire, however, no results were visible. A later interrogation of civilians and search of the area by an American artillery liaison officer obtained a report of five VC KIA's and uncovered portions of bones mutilated by artillery fire.

During the afternoon the 107mm Mortar Battery, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines was back loaded onto the Valley Forge, LPH-8, where it was returned to the control of the special landing force. Also the Provisional Battery comprised of two USMC 155 howitzers and ARVN howitzers operating with the ARVN was secured from Operation Double Eagle and returned to Quang Ngai.

Throughout the twenty-four hour period over thirteen hundred rounds were expended by the Provisional Artillery Group - the largest number of rounds ever fired in one day by this unit in nine months in Vietnam. The largest single factor contributing to the total was the blocking fires mentioned above. The H&I program was also heavier than usual.

During the day a mission was fired on four VC. Two were killed. About a dozen other missions were fired on such targets as VC in tree lines, observation posts, automatic weapons, and suspected positions. No surveillances were given.

Second Battalion, Ninth Marines, who had essentially been without artillery support since the 107mm Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 12th Marines had returned to the Beach Support Area, moved to a new area of operation north of Ba To. Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines assumed the role of providing fire support for them.

13 February

Major changes in the infantry's dispositions resulted in a corresponding change in the fire support roles of the artillery units. Third Battalion, First Marines swept their way north until they arrived back in the Beach Support Area. Fire support was provided them on their sweep primarily by Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines. Extensive smoke screening was fired to cover their river crossing.

Second Battalion, Third Marines was helo-lifted out into the Ba Te area where they operated in an area north of the Second Battalion, Ninth Marines. Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines provided fire support for friendly artillery.

Second Battalion, Fourth Marines continued to move north. In the afternoon they moved out of range of the LVTH-6 Platoon and into range of Battery M who assumed their support.

The 3rd 155 Gun Battery was back-loaded onto LCU's and brought back to the Beach Support Area where they were stored on the beach for return to Chu Lai. The Provisional Battery Group, now consisting of the LVTH-6 platoon and a headquarters detachment, remained in their main position where they provided support engineers working north on Highway #1 and one company of First Marines and Fourth Marines located on Highway #1 along the province boundary.

During the night a few rounds of incoming small arms fire were reported by both the Group and the Provisional Battery Group. No casualties were taken.

At dusk Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines fired on VC with automatic weapons and two 81mm mortars. Recon observed the mission. Follow up action revealed that both mortars were destroyed and possibly twelve VC were killed.

At the same time Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines fired on Vd in a weed line reported by the ARVN. Two KIA's were confirmed.

During the afternoon Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 12th Marines in support of Second Battalion, Ninth Marines fired on fifty VC in trenches. The rounds had good effect on target but no casualties were confirmed.

Approximately a dozen other missions were fired on such targets as suspected observation posts, snipers, troops, and possible ambushes. These missions were primarily in support of ARVN forces and Ninth Marines. No surveillances were given.

14 February

No changes were made in the disposition of the Provisional Artillery Group units, with the exception of the 3rd 155 Gun Battery which reboarded LCU shipping in the afternoon and began sailing for Chu Lai.

During the early evening an incoming grenade exploded just inside the perimeter of the Provisional Artillery Group. Later three more were thrown approximately two hundred meters behind Battery M. No casualties occurred.

The Countermeasures Radar Section was packed up and moved to the beach for back loading aboard ship.

During the late evening of 13 February 1966, Battery M and Battery H, 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines fired on a company reported by the ARVN. A later sweep of the area revealed there had been thirteen KIA's.

S-2 MattersIntelligence

The month of February was taken up entirely by Operation Double Eagle, Phase I and II. Intelligence matters for the month dealt with the situation encountered on the operation.

Intelligence indications, as estimated from artillery fire missions, showed that the Viet Cong units in and about the operational area were broken into small groups no larger than platoon size. As the operations progressed the indications were that the VC had withdrawn generally to the southwest, depending where they were cut off by advancing Marines and ARVN units. Small bands of VC were located in the operational area throughout the entire operation for harassment and security control over the local population. These units were capable of forming and dispersing quickly as dictated by the situation.

The Provisional Artillery Group received several noteworthy reports giving a good indication as to the control exercised by the VC in the area prior to the operation. One report came in from the Group Survey Section while it was operating with Second Battalion, Third Marines on Hill#348 (BT 053249) and Hill#378 (BT 056269). While they were in that area on the night of 24 February 210 civilians refugees were evacuated upon their own request. The VC had been using them to build fortifications on the western slopes of the ridge running north and south at coords. (BT 063 263). The fortifications were built to hold a large unit up to a battalion strength. When the Marines uncovered the construction only a small number of VC were in the area at the time.

Another report came to the Provisional Artillery Group from the ARVN forces which the Group was supporting. It stated that 120 villagers were being held by six VC at coords. (BT 044265). These people also reportedly desired to be evacuated.

Daily Intelligence Summaries were submitted by the Provisional Artillery Group to Task Force Delta. These reports along with numerous Spot Reports were submitted by telephone and recorded in the special S-2 Journal enclosed as Tab "A".

Aerial Observation

Aerial observation during the month of February for the Provisional Artillery Group was concerned exclusively with Operation Double Eagle, Phase I and II. The Provisional Artillery Group had three artillery aerial observers of which two were flying full time in support of the operation throughout the month. Overall the three observers launched seventy-seven missions, flying in excess of one-hundred and seventy-five hours.

ENCLOSURE (4)

During Phase I the artillery observers operated out of Quang Ngai flying in Ol-F aircraft provided by the First Platoon of the 200th Aviation Company, U.S. Army. For the first four days a dawn and dusk flight was launched into the objective area strictly for artillery support. After that the aerial observation program was combined for both artillery support and tactical air observation. On three nights flights were launched to provide radio relay between the artillery headquarters and the various liaison officers and forward terrain.

During Phase II all air observations were a joint program with both artillery and tactical air observers maintaining at least one aircraft on station from dawn to dusk. Aircraft support for this phase was provided by the Third Platoon of the 220th Aviation Company, U.S. Army. Ol-F aircraft were flown daily from Danang to the objective area where they operated out of dirt strip located southwest of Tam Ky. Lack of security at the airstrip required the aircraft to return nightly to Danang.

Highlights for artillery aerial observers during the operation included such incidents as finding and firing artillery on a number of bunkers with three confirmed kills. Another time twenty VC were located in a trench line. Artillery fire was called and again three confirmed kills were obtained. Toward the conclusion of the operation an artillery A.O. observed twenty VC flushed out by the ground troops. Armed Marine and Army helicopters were directed onto the place three or four of the fleeing VC stopped to hide. No confirmed kills were obtained, however a direct rocket hit was obtained on the bushes where the VC were hiding. On another mission a Group observer flying surveillance over an infantry sweep caught five or six VC attempting to flee the battle area and directed armed Army helicopters onto their hiding place. Two confirmed kills were obtained.

S-3 Matters

1. Summary of Significant Events. The most significant occurrence during the month was the fact that the Provisional Artillery Group was in continual support of Task Force Delta on Operation "Double Eagle", Phase I and Phase II. Phase I began 28 January and ended 17 February and Phase II began on 19 February and terminated on 28 February.

During Phase I, the LVTH-6 was employed with the Provisional Artillery Group for the first time. The LVTH-6, because of its amphibious and direct fire capabilities, spearheaded the three amphibious landings conducted during this phase of the operation. While under the operational control of the Provisional Battery Group, the LVTH-6 Platoon, 1st Amtrac Battalion employed high angle self illumination for direct fire for the first time since being reactivated by the Marine Corps.

On 8 February, Battery M (-) 4/11 and Battery H 3/11 took a VC village under fire at the request of the ARVN. As a result of this mission, there were 4 confirmed VC KIA's, 4 VC WIA's and 40 block type houses destroyed. The ARVN swept the village shortly after the mission and captured 15 VC in shock as a result of the Artillery fire.

On 9 February, 26 rounds of 105 smoke and white phosphorus were fired to screen an infantry company committed to extract a squad trapped by the VC across the river, 1000 meters from the Beach Support Area. On 10 February another screen was used to cover the infantry company's recrossing the Song Tra Cau River back to the Beach Support Area. The infantry reported the screen was excellent and greatly aided their crossing.

At dusk, on 13 February, VC's with automatic weapons and two 81mm mortars, were taken under fire by Battery H 3/11 in support of Recon operations. The surveillance was 12 possible KIA's and 2 81mm mortars destroyed, marking these as the first successful counter mortar fire for the Provisional Artillery Group.

The use of helicopter, during Phase I, in transporting 107mm mortars and 105mm Howitzers greatly aided the Provisional Artillery Group in speedily providing effective artillery support to all Task Force Delta units. These weapons were often lifted into areas inaccessible by normal motorized transportation. Also during Phase I, Aerial observers were on station throughout the evenings to act as radio relay between the Provisional Artillery Group Command Post and the forward units. This was needed because of the large area of operations and the mountainous terrain.

During Phase I of the operation Marine units were able to receive fire support from elements of the Army's 1st Cavalry Division through the Liaison section of Task Force Delta.

During Phase II of Operation "Double Eagle" the Provisional Artillery Group attached Liaison and Forward Observer Teams to the 6th Regiment, 2nd ARVN Division and to the 1st and 4th Vietnamese Marine Battalions. During this phase of the operation Provisional Artillery Group Batteries fired in support of Vietnamese Army and Marine units and ARVN artillery fired in support of U.S. Marine Units.

On 24 February, a Provisional Rifle Company local security patrol received heavy sniper fire from an estimated 20 VC while patrolling to the front of the Provisional Artillery Group perimeter. As heavy fire was returned, one Marine was seriously wounded. A Medical Evacuation helicopter was requested. As the firefight continued two more marines were seriously wounded. The two escort helicopters fired rockets and machine guns to suppress the small arms fire preventing the medical evacuation. After the evacuation, Marines poured rockets from the escort helicopter, small arms fire and 120 rounds of artillery into the VC positions. Artillery fire resulted in 2 possible VC KIA's, several houses destroyed with 4 secondary explosions. Marine casualties from the firefight were one KIA and 2 serious W.I.'s.

On 24 February, 2/3 arranged to have 84 villagers in their zone of action helolifted to Tam Ky for relocation. On 25 February, acting on a report that there were others desiring to be relocated, the 107mm Mortar Battery 1/12 and 2/3 made arrangement to relocate an additional 130 Vietnamese. These villagers were flown to Tam Ky on the afternoon of 25 February. Further reports indicate 120 villagers at Loc An #1 coordinates BT 044265 desired to be moved as the VC were using them for forced labor, but operational commitments precluded their relocation. Of the 214 Vietnamese at least 4 were confirmed VC asking for political asylum.

On 26 February, Battery M 4/11 fired 85 rounds on a VC platoon at coordinates BT 135285. The liaison officer with the Vietnamese Marines reported 20 VC KIA's.

During Phase I and II of Operation "Double Eagle", the Provisional Artillery Group units used motorized convoys, LVT's, and CH-3 and UH-34 helicopters to displace batteries. A total of 52 displacements were conducted to maintain support of Task Force Delta units.

2. Training. The Command was committed on Operation Double Eagle during the entire month of February.

3. Command and Control. During the month of February the Provisional Artillery Group was assigned in support of operations by Task Force Delta for Operation Double Eagle. During Phase I of this operation all Artillery units were assigned a mission of general support with the following exceptions: Battery H 3/11, though in general support, answered calls for fire directly from 2/3, 2/4 and 2/9 during the Period 1 February to 7 February and the LVTH-6 Platoon 1st Amtrac Bn, in general support, answered calls for fire directly from 2/3 and 3/1 during the period 3 February to 16 February. 107mm Mortar Battery 1/12 was assigned in direct support of 3/1 at 161047H to cover the backloading of Task Force Delta units. This direct support mission was assumed by the LVTH-6 Platoon 1st Amtrac Bn at 161500H to allow the remaining units of Task Force Delta to backload. Backloading was completed aboard the Fort Marion, LSD-22 at 171100H. Off loading at Chu Lai was completed at 180200H and Phase I of this operation was completed on 19 February.

At 190500H, units of the Provisional Artillery Group commenced motor movement to the locale of Part II of operation Double Eagle; the central Tinh Quang Tin Province. Units deleted from the group for Phase II were Battery M (-) SP, 4/11, the 3rd 155 Gun Battery (-) SP Force Troops FMF PAC, 107mm Mortar Battery 3/12, the LVTH-6 platoon 1st Amtrac Battalion, and Detachment, Company A, 1st Amtrac Battalion. Included in the Provisional Artillery Group as of 19 February were Battery L 4/12 and Battery M 4/11. All artillery units were assigned a mission of general support of Task Force Delta. Part II of Operation Double Eagle was concluded at 281430H with the return of the group by convey to Chu Lai. Operational Control of the Provisional Artillery Group was transferred to the 11th Marines Regiment on 1 March 1966.

4. Local Security. Local security during Operation "Double Eagle" was largely provided by the Provisional Rifle Company, a unit composed of various support elements from the SLF. During short periods when this unit was deployed elsewhere, infantry units provided necessary security. On all occasions security forces were augmented with personnel from the Provisional Artillery Group.

Internal security was provided by utilizing roving posts within the command post location. All personnel were required to dig foxholes and blackout was rigidly enforced. Important installations were sandbagged when sandbags became available. A TD-15 was used to dig in installations during Double Eagle I. An emergency reaction force was formed from Hqs Battery Although its use was never required.

Security elements made extensive use of two man posts. Platoon areas were connected by wire to the Security Company CP area. A hotline from the Company CP to the FDC provided the Artillery Group Commander with instantaneous information on enemy activity. Ambushes were laid nightly and communications were maintained by radio. In Double Eagle II, it became necessary to coordinate ambush sites with ARVN forces in the area to preclude misdirected friendly fire since ARVN fire discipline left much to be desired.

During Double Eagle I, constant VC probing and sniping occurred during the hours of darkness. Sporadic sniping occurred during the daytime. This fire was returned with small arms, automatic weapons including the 50 caliber machine gun, and direct fire employing the 105mm howitzer. Several bunker targets were spotted from the CP area and were fired upon by 155 howitzers (SF) and tanks. Self illumination utilizing the LVTH-6 was provided on occasion with considerable effectiveness.

Heavy sniping and probing also occurred in Double Eagle II, although only during the hours of darkness. Incoming grenades were received by friendly posts and one friendly KIA resulted. As the artillery position was isolated from infantry positions, it was necessary to send out friendly patrols during daylight hours. Enemy contact was reported on every patrol and one friendly KIA, and two MIA's resulted from heavy sniper fire encountered on one occasion. It is believed that patrolling effectively prevented organized attacks on the artillery position area.

SID devices could have been effectively utilized but none were available. Maximum use of trip flares and crew served weapons was achieved in all positions. The Force Recon Company which provided local security on the final night of the operation utilized Claymore mines. It is recommended that these mines be made available for all future operations. Additional sandbags and concertina could have been effectively utilized had they been available.

5. FSCC. During the entire period covered in this report, the Artillery Liaison Officer and teams and Naval Gunfire Liaison Officer and teams functioned as the FSCC for Task Force Delta during Operation Double Eagle I and II. This FSCC in addition to its normal duties of coordinating the three arms (air, artillery and Naval Gunfire) supporting the Task Force also coordinated the employment of these arms in support of ARVN Marine Battalions and units of the ARVN 2nd Division. In the latter stages of Double Eagle I, they also established liaison with the 1st Cavalry (airmobile) Division U.S. Army and arranged the necessary procedures to enable the U.S. Marine Battalions to obtain additional artillery support from the artillery units of that Division.

LOGISTICS SUMMARY

1. Logistics. During the month the Battalion was deployed under Task Force DELTA for Operation Double Eagle. The primary logistic source was "C" Company, 3d Shore Party Battalion. Support provided included all classes of supply, medical facilities/evacuation, a system for returning equipment to FLSU One for 3d echelon repair or direct exchange, and post exchange items in the form of Ration Supplement Sundries Packs. Following is a synopsis of the supplies provided:

a. Class I: Approximately 4829 cases of Meal, Combat, Individual were issued to the artillery and attached security units; 3500 pounds, 1190 cubic feet of the above were helicopter lifted.

b. Class III: 1800 gallons of MOGAS were consumed.

c. Class V: Artillery rounds expended were as follows:

105mm Ammo	6395 rounds	6395 cuft	383700 lbs
107mm Ammo	1898 rounds	2847 cuft	84920 lbs
155mm Ammo	4337 rounds	6505 cuft	563810 lbs
TOTALS	12630 rounds	15747 cuft	1032430 lbs

Of the above, approximately 54,000 pounds were helicopter lifted.

2. Supply. There were 345 requisitions submitted during the month, 529 were filled. This is a 153% fill to submitted ratio.

a. Major problems were reported in Logistics Summary Number 24 and 25 (Tab A) and Logistic Status Report (Tab B).

b. Deficiencies in operating stocks were reported in Logistic Status Report as of 28 February 1966.

3. Motor Transport. Motor Transport deadline was 7%. Due to the terrain of the operating area very little motor transport was utilized during the first half of the month. LVTP-5's were used to move supplies, equipment, and personnel in this area. This was sharply changed when the battalion launched the second phase of Operation Double Eagle by motor convoy to Tam Ky, approximately 21 miles from base camp, for ten days of combat operations. During this period motor vehicles and helicopters were utilized extensively.

4. Embarkation. The battalion was embarked on LSD-22, Fort Marion, for return to the Chu Lai area after completion of the first phase of Operation Double Eagle. No unusual difficulties were encountered.

1. Communications-Electronics activities this month will be amplified by the sub-paragraphs listed below.

- (A) Radio. This command was involved in operation Double Eagle. Radio Communications (FM) were very satisfactory. Use of relays were necessary to reach distant units. One station located approximately 30,000 meters from NCS was held constantly 5/5 with a PRC-9. Mask ran to 600 meters between stations. PRC-25's were very effectively used by liaison and P.O. teams. Their portability and good range with the long whip antenna make the set ideal for mobile communications. The covered ratt circuit to Danang was secured by this unit during this period.
- (B) Wire. Wire was limited on Operation Double Eagle, and all procedures used were standard.
- (C) Maintenance. 1st and 2nd echelon maintenance continued to be favorable. 3rd echelon work and repair has been consistent with availability of parts.
- (D) Comm-Elect Supply. Dry cell batteries have been supplied regularly. BA-414's have started to come in steadily. TE 33's, wire, electrical tape are still in short supply
