CONFIDENTIALPART II. Narrative Summary (C)

Although HMM-161 was operating on reduced aircraft availability because of the damage by Typhoon Dora on 2 September, the squadron still flew 986.1 hours for the month. During a two day critical period, the squadron received augmentation assistance from HMM-263. Resupply was conducted throughout the month on a routine basis to Marine, Army and ARVN units deployed in the field. The squadron, in providing helicopter support to the Third Marine Division, supported Operations IDAHO CANYON, ARLINGTON CANYON and GEORGIA TAR. In addition to a battalion size assault, the 2nd ARVN Division also received logistic assistance as HMM-161 once again played an important role in their TAOR. Med-Evac missions were prevalent daily, though enemy contact was sporadic. Those casualties withdrawn from the field of battle were courageously and expertly evacuated to medical facilities by the flight crews of HMM-161.

The latter part of September saw HMM-161 enter a new phase of logistical combat support in the Republic of South Vietnam. Due to the reduction of Marines within the Northern ICTZ, the squadron's main tasks were the withdrawal and relocation of elements of the Third Marine Division along the Northern and Northwestern frontiers of South Vietnam.

During the period 26 through 28 September, HMM-161 assumed a stand-down status as the squadron prepared to redeploy from Quang Tri (ITU Air Base) to Phu Bai. Normal operations were continued on 29 September 1969.

Statistics: There were 12,752 troops/passengers carried, 308.4 tons of cargo transported, 236 personnel medically evacuated, This support resulted in 986.1 flight hours, 3,510 sorties flown, 2,114 tasks accomplished. The squadron was fragged for 141 missions of which 135 were completed for a completion rate of 95.7%.

COMMAND CHRONOLOGY

- 1 Sep HMM-161, fragged for four missions, flew 27.0 hours completing 119 sorties and 75 tasks. Five medevac missions were flown with one emergency and five priority medevacs being transported to medical facilities. It was necessary to hoist one of the priority medevacs; this was expertly done by Lt. M. FINNERTY. His professional ability prevented further injury to the wounded Marine.
- 2 Sep Today Quang Tri was hit by Typhoon Dora. Winds were in excess of 70 plus knots and all operations were cancelled. The high wind caused excessive blade flapping and new rotor blades were required for 18 of our aircraft.
- 3 Sep Crews worked around the clock last night and were able to get one aircraft in an up status. A total of 7.8 hours were flown completing 25 sorties and 20 tasks, carrying 117 passengers. HMM-161 supplied two crews this evening to relieve the crews of the two HMM-263 aircraft which were augmented to us.
- 4 Sep HMM-161 operations were still slowed down because of the storm damage to aircraft. Even though rotor blades were slow in coming, three aircraft were available for frag. Fifty sorties and thirty-two tasks were completed in 14.4 flight hours. The squadron transported 121 passengers, one of which was a priority medevac.
- 5 Sep HMM-161 was fragged for and completed six missions. One hundred and eighty four sorties were flown in 46.8 hours. Five hundred and twenty nine passengers and 15.5 tons of cargo were transported by the squadron.
At 0200H two aircraft launched on an emergency medevac to 280°/26½ NM from Quang Tri for a recon team member who had been bitten by a snake. After several unsuccessful attempts to hoist the medevac, the aircraft had to return to Quang Tri for fuel. Upon returning, the recon team had cleared a zone for the plane. Lt L. D. TIMMERMAN attempted to back into the zone following instructions from the crew chief and the recon team radio operator but hit a tree with his aft blades. Because of severe vibrations the pilot was forced to make an emergency landing approximately 1500 meters away. A security force was inserted as soon as possible.
- 6 Sep The squadron was fragged for five missions. We flew 73 sorties completed 52 tasks while flying 24.3 flight hours. Two hundred and five pax were carried and 3.4 tons of cargo were delivered. One emergency, four priority and three routine medevacs were transported to medical facilities in eight medevac missions.
At 1000H, a recovery team was launched to repair the aircraft downed the night before. The team took sporadic small arms fire while working on the A/C, but continued to repair the damage. The aircraft recovery team and security force were flown out without further incident.
