On the afternoon of 4 May 1969 Capt Ivan A. Laing was notified to alert his Peachbush Recovery Team and make ready for an immediate departure to an unsecure zone in which a Peachbush aircraft had just been shot down. Peachbush 3-1, the wingman of the downed bird, picked up Captain Laing's Recovery Team at Marble Mountain and flew them into the downed aircraft's zone, taking light small sporadic small arms fire during the approach. Once in the zone he quickly organized his team and set them to the task of preparing the damaged aircraft for extraction by a CH-54. Their task was hampered by continuous sniper fire which became consistently more frequent all the time they were in the zone. Capt Laing efficiently and effectively coordinated all aspects of preparing the a/c and pitched in himself wherever his help was needed. Due to his leadership
