This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. Two circular binder holes are punched through the paper near the top center. The paper appears to be part of a notebook or a set of loose-leaf papers, as evidenced by the dark binding material visible along the left edge. There is no handwriting or printed text on the page.

The image displays four horizontal strips of lined paper, each featuring a single handwritten cursive letter. The letters are 'A', 'B', 'C', and 'D', written in a consistent, fluid cursive style. The strips are arranged horizontally, with the 'A' strip on the left, followed by 'B', 'C', and 'D' from left to right. Each letter is written in dark ink on the white background of the lined paper.
