

KEEP A GOOD THING GOING...

Your training and experience are still needed.

Thanks.

It's too small a word to convey our appreciation for the job you've done. By investing your time, your energy and your know-how in our Country's freedom, you've done your part and you've done it well.

But it doesn't have to end here. You can keep the thanks coming. You're still needed—by your fellow soldiers—by your community—by your Country.

You're needed to do the job you've been trained to do. To work as a civilian. To serve as a soldier. A citizen-soldier in the U.S. Army Reserve.

W. C. Westmoreland

General, United States Army
Chief of Staff

For additional information contact your nearest Army Reserve Unit Commander. Look in your telephone directory under "U. S. Government (Army)" for the address and phone number.

KEEP A GOOD THING GOING...

What's in it for you? Anytime you make an investment, you have a right to expect something in return. When you invest your spare time in the U.S. Army Reserve, here are some of the things in it for you:

- Advancement opportunities with pay
- Further development
- Leadership opportunities
- Retirement pay and benefits
- Serve in your own community
- Valuable contacts

Advancement opportunities with pay:

There's always the chance to get ahead in today's Army Reserve. And with the added promotions comes added cash. A full day's pay for every four-hour training session you attend. This money comes in handy as a supplement to your civilian pay. For every day of Active Duty Training you'll receive the same pay, allowances, commissary and PX privileges as an Active Army soldier.

Further development:

As a member of the U.S. Army Reserve you can go farther, faster in your civilian career. There is an Army Reserve School near your home. You may take correspondence courses and you also have the opportunity for other courses at Active Army Schools.

Leadership opportunities:

You will have the opportunity to train your friends and neighbors in the skills you learned while on active duty. Your training requirement of three years in the Individual Ready Reserve may be shortened to two years by serving in a unit.

Retirement pay and benefits:

Retirement seems a long way off right now, but the extra money you get for finishing up the rest of your 20 years of service in the Army Reserve can add to your security and comfort in your retirement years. It would take a $25,000 annuity to provide a monthly income of $139 at age 60 which is the approximate retired pay of a master sergeant after 30 years' service.

Serve in your own community:

You'll be serving with your friends. Your neighbors. Your fellow workers. You'll have the chance to keep up to date in your special skill and still remain in your own hometown.

Valuable contacts:

Eighty-eight percent of the senior officers in the U.S. Army Reserve hold national or local office in civic and professional associations which are unrelated to military service. That means you'll be serving and working with the business leaders of your community. Men who can help you get ahead in your civilian career. Possibly even help you get a better job.

