11TH Infantry Brigade

On 1 July 1966, concurrent with the formation of the 4th Battalion, 3d Infantry (The Old Guard), Headquarters and Headquarters Company was also formed. With only a small handful of Officers and enlisted personnel, the cornerstone of the Battalion was laid and the building began from the ground, up.

Taking over as the first Company Commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company was a newly commissioned second lieutenant by the name of Alfred J. Lopresti. He had been commissioned at Fort Benning, Georgia the very month that his new unit had been formed. On 31 July 1966, with a strength of 3 Officers and 19 enlisted men, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, under the direction of Lt. Lopresti and acting 1st Sgt. Robert E. Jarles, began building the organizational framework and facilities that would begin accepting the newly assigned personnel and equipment.

On 29 August 1966, command of Headquarters and Headquarters Company was passed from Lt. Lopresti to Capt. William R. Daknis who had just arrived from a tour at Fort Polk, Louisiana. Lt. Lopresti then became the Executive Officer of the Company. On this same date Sgt. Richard G. McGinness reported in to the newly formed unit and took over as 1st Sgt of Headquarters and Headquarters Company after having served with the 1st Battalion, 3d Infantry (Old Guard) at Fort Meyer, Virginia. By the end of August, Officer strength stood at 12 and enlisted strength at 74, with one Warrant Officer having also been assigned.

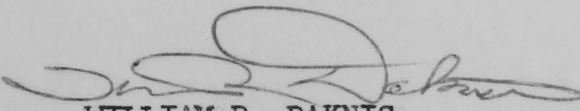

During the first month following the formation, training was held to a minimum, due to the lack of personnel, equipment, and the initial tasks of getting the unit organized. By late August pre cycle training for the Battalion and the Company got underway. Training for the Company initially centered around general military subjects for all personnel then assigned. A schedule of physical training, basic communications, first aid and drill and ceremonies initiated the training for Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Throughout September the personnel and equipment necessary for training continued to increase. On 26 September the Basic Unit Training phase of the training cycle began, and by mid-October the Company had it's full compliment of Officers. The basic organizational structure of the company had been completed. The Medical Platoon, The 4.2 inch Mortar Platoon, the Communication Platoon, the Recon Platoon, the Anti-Tank Platoon, the Maintenance Platoon and the Ground Surveillance Section, although not at full enlisted strength, were at least operational and beginning to function and train for their mission in the Battalion.

Throughout October and November weapons, radios, vehicles and other equipment began to arrive in increasing quantities and the pace of training continued to quicken. Selected Officers and enlisted personnel from Headquarters and Headquarters Company began to attend the various schools and special courses operated by the U.S. Army, Hawaii at Schofield Barracks. Courses in CBR operations, Mess Management, The Army Equipment Records System and Air Mobility were attended by Company personnel. Other courses for PLL clerks, clerk-typists, generator operators, wheeled vehicle operators, forward observers and fire direction personnel were all helping to strengthen, little by little, the Company and the Battalion.

By the end of November the Battalion had been on bivouac at East Range training area and had a first taste of the teamwork that is necessary for a unit to function. Then, in early December, the 4.2 inch Mortar Platoon took their first Army Training Test and achieved the significant honor of being the 4.2 inch Mortar Platoon in the Brigade with the highest ATT score.

During the latter part of December Headquarters and Headquarters Company, along with the rest of the Battalion, turned in the M-14 rifle in exchange for the new M-16 rifle. By the end of December 18 Officers, 2 Warrant Officers, and 188 enlisted men had qualified on the new M-16 rifle. Headquarters and Headquarters Company had topped off a tough, but satisfying, first six months of training.
