

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

From PAUL EHRLICH'S Foreword:

"This book is published as a historical record and with the hope that the methods and techniques employed by the Hugh Moore Fund may be of use to the growing army of devoted men and women now engaged in the struggle to control the greatest menace of our time."

ARTHUR GODFREY:

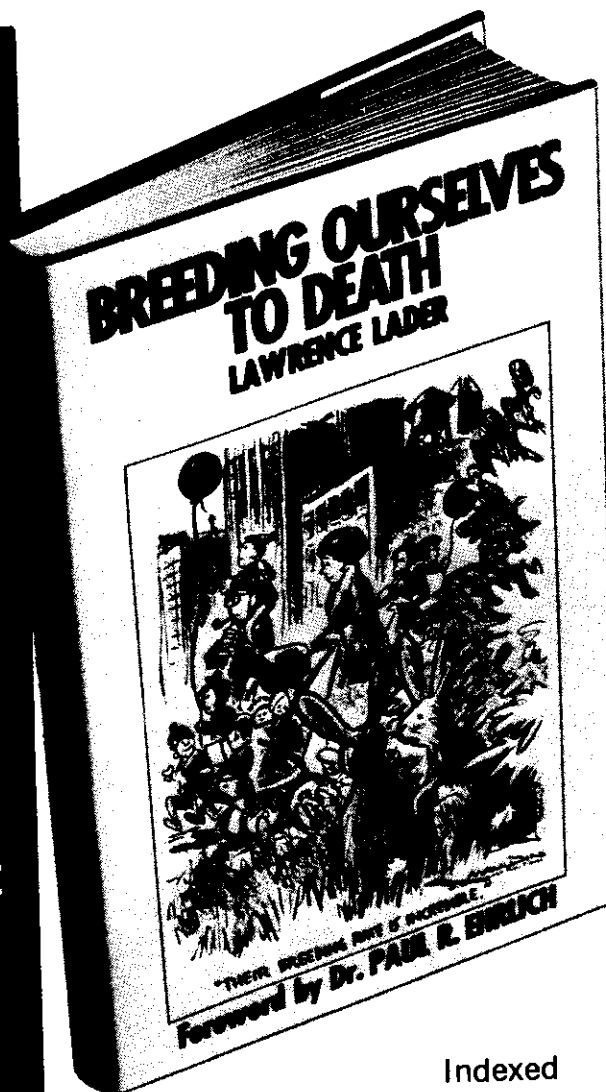

"I highly recommend this book."

SENATOR ROBERT PACKWOOD:

"A significant contribution toward . . . bringing our population crisis to the attention of the American people."

DAVID BROWER:

"The Hugh Moore Fund's techniques of public persuasion hold lessons for all conservation organizations."

Who originated the term "population bomb"?

How did advertising stir government action to defuse that bomb?

What is the difference between family planning and population control?

Here's the story of the Hugh Moore Fund's two-decade campaign that has helped revolutionize U.S. public attitudes about population.
