Mr. Courtney Siceloff

Dear Mr. Siceloff:

As you read in our recent issue of COMMITMENT, our national convention was the occasion of a desperate outcry on the part of lay and religious leaders from all over the country to the Catholic Church for a more effective interest and concern for the racial gap which is growing wider day by day in our country.

The National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice is already responding to this cry and with your help will increase its efforts. We plan to launch a series of regional programs; an intensified Sisters Urban Education program, black - white dialogs, and we will play a very active role in the hunger campaign, minority employment in the construction industry, and police community relations projects.

Your past financial support has enabled the Conference to initiate and continue many programs such as Project Equality, Traveling Workshops, etc.

Now we need your help to reach more people and answer their desperate plea to Catholics for help. We want to spread the cost of these programs proportionately among our contributors. Therefore, Mr. Siceloff, if you would send us $4.97, our work will continue to grow.

Thank you for your help and know that through your gift the racial gap can be narrowed.

Gratefully yours,

James T. Harris Jr.
