About NTIS

The central source for U.S. and foreign government scientific, technical and business information

The National Technical Information Service (NTIS) provides access to the results of both U.S. and foreign government-sponsored R&D and engineering activities.

As the U.S. Government's central source for scientific and technical information, NTIS:

- Announces through its information products more than 60,000 summaries of U.S. and foreign government-sponsored R&D and engineering activities annually. These summaries detail the knowledge and technology generated through U.S. Government's multi-billion dollar R&D effort.
- Provides the complete technical reports for most of the results it announces.
- Manages the Federal Computer Products Center. This center provides access to software, data files, and databases produced by Federal agencies.
- Manages the Center for the Utilization of Federal Technology (CUFT) which prepares directories and catalogs linking U.S. firms to key and selected U.S. Government technologies and Federal laboratory contacts. CUFT also runs the most active inventions licensing program in the U.S. Government.
- Brings U.S. firms access to more than 15,000 foreign government-sponsored research and engineering programs annually. NTIS is the lead U.S. Government agency for cooperation in technical information exchange. Through agreements with hundreds of organizations, new R&D efforts are announced from countries such as Japan, West Germany, Great Britain, France, and other leading industrialized nations.

NTIS is a unique Government agency sustained only by sales revenue. The cost of NTIS salaries, marketing, postage, and all other operating costs is paid for from the sales of its products. Costs are not covered by tax-supported Congressional appropriations.
