

AGENT ORANGE

From 1962 to at least 1971 "agent orange" was used in South Viet Nam. "Agent orange", a defoliant, contains trace amounts of dioxin. Dioxin is a very toxic substance which causes skin pitting (called Choracne) and may cause cancer and birth defects. Several Federal and Air Force studies on dioxin are underway. Some say that these studies are coverups. Others point out that important scientific studies take time. It would seem that little is known of dioxin. Yet John G. Fullers book "The Poison That Fell From The Sky" (Random House) documents the effects of dioxin poisoning. Fuller describes a chemical plant explosion which contaminated several thousand people near Milan Italy. The incident occurred in 1976, the poison was trace amounts of dioxin.

Several persons are now collecting "agent orange" (A.O.) information. Join them or give them your support. They need documents, information, stamps,

We need better A.O. maps which we will continue to send out free.
