Eastern Airlines can take you home without ever going out of their way.

If you live anywhere in the eastern U.S. it's no problem for Eastern to get you back home. After all they fly more often to more than 100 cities than any other airline. Those gourmet, in flight meals will be no bother either... you see, giving you special service is what Eastern is all about. Why don't you meet them in Los Angeles, Portland or Seattle and go home in style.

DOWNTOWN WALKING TOUR

To get downtown from Waikiki take any 2R bus on Kalakaua Avenue to Kapiolani and King Street and begin your sightseeing with:

MISSION HOUSES — 553 S. King Street near Iolani Palace. Beautifully restored homes used by missionaries from 1821 to 1896. Visits by tour only. Admission: adults $1.50, children under 12 years old 75 ¢.

KAWAIAHAO CHURCH — King Street near Iolani Palace. "Westminster Abbey of Hawaii." Weekdays 9 a.m.-3 p.m., Sat. to noon. Sun. services 10:30 a.m.

KAMEHAMEHA STATUE — In front of the Judiciary Building across from the Palace on King Street. Symbol of Hawaii. Larger than life statue of the unifier of the islands.

IOLANI PALACE — On King Street. The only royal palace on American soil. Built by King Kalakaua. Housed royalty for 11 years, and television's "Hawaii-5-O." filmed here. Open 8 a.m.-12 noon, 1-4 p.m. Mon.-Fri., 8-11:45 a.m. on Saturday. Free.

IOLANI BARRACKS — Adjacent to Palace. Once home of King's Guard. Relocated from site of new Capitol to present location. Restoration not yet complete.

ARCHIVES — On the Palace grounds 50 yards from the Library. For the scientific-minded student of history. Invaluable documents, journals, photographs. Largest collection of Hawaiian in existence. Hours: 7:45 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Mon.-Fri., 8 a.m.-12 noon Sat.

STATE CAPITOL — Between Hotel and S. Beretania St. near Punchbowl St. New $20,000,000 building. Dedicated early in 1969. Houses Governor and Lt. Governor's offices, Senate and House of Representatives, and various state depts. Open: 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Mon.-Fri.

WASHINGTON PLACE — S. Beretania St. across from the Iolani Palace. Residence of the Governor of State of Hawaii. Not open to the public.

LIBRARY OF HAWAII — In Palace Square. Free to the public. Excellent Hawaiian Room and reference department. Hours: 9 a.m.-9 p.m. Mon.-Fri., 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Sat., 1-5 p.m. Sun.

Return across Palace Grounds and cross King St. to stand in front of World War II Memorial (near King Kamehameha Statue) for bus back to Waikiki.

GO NATIVE

When in Hawaii, dress as the locals do. Which means comfortable, bright and versatile. For instance, muumuus. Muumuus have come a long way since missionary wives wrapped unclad native ladies in half a dozen yards of muslin. Today Island designers create chic, fashionable muumuus in every conceivable style and fabric.

For daytime wear, a "shortie muu" (or even a "mini-muu") is cool, neat and practical. In the evening you can get just as fancy as you like in lace, silk, chiffon — even mink-trimmed brocade — floor-length models. Variations on the basic Hawaiian muumuu include the holomu, fitted to the knee, then flared; holoku, the same design but with a slight train in back; "missionary muu," usually high-necked with a yoke and leg-o-mutton sleeves; and a dozen other modifications with Indian, Japanese and Chinese accents.

Then there are pants, of course. You'll find pants every bit as popular in Hawaii as on the Mainland and you'll find just as wide a selection to choose from. For strenuous sightseeing, a gaily-printed pants suit is perfect. Or perhaps wide-legged pajamas or a jumpsuit. Nighttime pants suits might be of delicate see-through Philippine pina cloth or something as simple as wash-and-wear knit.

Incidentally, both long, dressy muumuus and pants are acceptable in even the plushiest restaurants. And when you're buying, have fun with color. Hawaii is the place for it. If your hometown is somewhat more conservative, you can always wear your muumuus for at-home hostessing or substitute a plain white blouse for the wild cerise one that came with the pants suit.

You mustn't forget beachwear. In a land where sun-bathing season lasts 12 months a year, fashion designers go mad with bathing suits, cover-ups, crazy terry carry-alls, headgear, clogs and you-name-it. You really owe it to yourself to splurge on at least one bikini or a swinging net cage.

The key word in Hawaii is comfort — and that applies to footwear, especially. Pick out some medium or low-heeled lightweight sandals and forget about stockings. Let your toes wiggle happily in the balmy breeze. Thong slippers complement Hawaiian wear beautifully, but one caution—if you aren't used to them, don't wear them for long periods or lots of walking.

For the men in your life, the same rules of comfort apply. In all but a very few restaurants coats and ties are not required; open-necked 'aloha shirts are the thing. Slacks or walking shorts and an aloha shirt will go anywhere and do anything. And, by the way, aloha shirts are not necessarily loud clashes of screeching colors. Most are marvelously designed prints from the quietly elegant to the bold tropical; colorful, yes, but tastefully so.

Now aren't you glad you didn't cram your suitcase with Mainland-type suits, coats and jackets? Just think of all that space you have for those glorious goodies you will wear here and take home to dazzle your friends!

MORE VISITORS

What bit of Hawaiiana attracted the most visitors in 1968? The Honolulu Zoo. Across from Waikiki Beach at Kapiolani Park, it drew over 900,000 visitors with 1 million projected for this year. Set in 40 acres of lushly planted, tree-shaded beauty with Diamond Head as its backdrop, the pulsing Pacific just across the street, and a collection of birds, beasts and sea loving creatures guaranteed to captivate Dr. Dolittle, our Honolulu Zoo is a many splendored place.

Lined up like a Palace Guard at the entrance, past a huge banyan tree, is a seemingly official delegation of white pigeons to courteously escort you through the portals, their purpose, besides hospitality, seemingly to lure you into using some of your film on them and their progeny.

Inside this multihued enclave, efficiently presided over by Director Jack A. Throp, lies the world of the pampas, the jungle, the desert and the isles of Japan, all overlaid with an atmosphere of Hawaii. Background music is a medley of Birdland and "The Animals." I found it difficult to move past the pink flamingoes, standing, apparently indefinitely, on one leg. Maybe the trick is induced by the carrot juice they're fed. The Japanese cranes have a picture book quality all their own, and the South American rheas remind one of Bonnie and Clyde. The Llamas described as "pack animals" seemingly take no chances on enforced labor, preferring a reclining position. And the India elephants not only curl their trunks adroitly but execute a stately dance while their offspring oblige with a frenetic frug. The exhibit of apes convinced me blondes have more fun. THEIR blonde had it all her own way. But I lingered little at the gorillas — too human, too fierce, too antisocial.

Though the Honolulu Zoo is most famous for its tropical birds, including the native nene and Hawaiian Honey Creepers, there's a wealth of animal life acquired by judicious trading with other zoos around the world. The giraffes, by the way, obviously feel at home here and, ignoring all planned parenthood rules, raise large families. The grizzly bears, bengal tigers, zebras, Galapagos tortoises (reminiscent of Volkswagens) and camels here certainly could hold their own in any distinguished zoological assembly.

Once a year a "Romper Day" for children is held at the zoo. Last year 31,000 young attended and many of the animals were brought out for their closer inspection.

With antelope and seal, Wallabies and Wallaroos from Australia, with simulated native habitats, and sweet scented plumeria and tulip trees, the Honolulu Zoo is a very special place indeed! Admission is free. Hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

HAPPY TALK Hawaiian or Pidgin

From "Aloha nui loa" to "Hey, Bruddah, I tink you no can park dere!" just about spans the range of conversation you'll hear in Hawaii. And most Island people can spout liquid Hawaiian words and harsh pidgin phrases in equally liberal doses.

Many genuine Hawaiian words have come into such common usage a kamaaina (long-time resident) doesn't even realize they are unintelligible to malihiniis (new-comers).

The Hawaiian alphabet, handed down from the missionaries, consist of only 12 letters: the vowels, a, e, i, o, and u and the consonants, h, k, l, m, n, p, and w. Vowels are pronounced European-fashion — a as in father; e as in neigh; i as in marine; o as in no; u as in rule. Every syllable and every word ends with a vowel and every vowel should be pronounced separately, except for a few diphthongs such as au pronounced (ow) ai (eye), and ei (lay). For instance, the Oahu street name, Kalaniana'ole—which looks pretty tongue-twisting—is syllabalized as Ka-lani-ana-ole and pronounced Kah-lanee-ahnah-olee. Not so bad after all.

Consonants are pronounced pretty much as in English, except for w which sometimes sounds like v, generally when it is the first letter of the last syllable, in the Oahu place name, Kaaawa (pronounced Kah-ah-alivah). But don't make the mistake of pronouncing any w as a v. Waikiki is Waikiki, not Vaikiki. As for Hawaii (or Havaii), there are two schools of thought.

Accenting Hawaiian words is fairly consistent—the accent falls on the next to last syllable, as in a-lo'-ha, wa-hi'-ni (woman), pu-pu'-le (crazy). The rule holds true in four-letter words like ka'-ne (man) and pa'-li (cliff). In the case of words which end in a diphthong, such as ma-kai' (toward the sea) or a-ka-mai' (smart or clever), the accent falls where it would if there were no diphthong. That is, if ma-ka'-i and aka-mai were a-ka-ma'-i.

Some of the Hawaiian words you will hear frequently during your stay include: alii (chiefs or nobles); hale (house); haole (white man—pronounced how-lee); huhu (angry); hui (group); kapu (forbidden); kaukau (food); keiki (child); kokua (aid); kuleana (area of interest); luau (feast); mahalo (thank you); muumuu (dress); ono (good); opu (belly); pau (finished); pilikia (trouble); puka (hole); punee (couch); pupu (hor d' oeuvre).

Pidgin, however, is a tougher nut to crack. Generally it eliminates unnecessary words, elides words together, drops off endings. "How is it?" becomes "Howzit?"; "waste of time" becomes "wasetime"; "what's the matter?" becomes "whassamatta?"; "That's what I've been thinking" becomes "Dat's what I been tink".

An indispensable pidgin word is "da kine" which comes from "the kind" or "that kind". It's used in all sorts of ways and means most anything. "Hey, you an' her da kine?" might mean "Are you two married?"; "Moki got da kine haole clothes" could mean "Look at Moki. He's wearing shoes"; "I want da kine raw fish" probably means "I'd like some sashimi."

And pidgin makes its own rules about the order of words in a sentence. A favorite Island joke of a mother who chides her child for asking, "Where you was?" and carefully explains the proper expression is, "Where was you?"

It's all pure pidgin—pure, delightful, da kine pidgin.

FABULOUS REPLICA OF

It took three years and over two and a half million dollars to reproduce the famed Byodo-in Temple which has stood for nine hundred years in Uji, just outside the city of Kyoto in Japan. It also took the combined art, skills and knowledge of artists, architects, craftsmen and historians to bring forth this breathtaking "double" of what is considered one of the most beautiful buildings in a country of beauty, Japan.

Built by The Valley of The Temples Corporation in their memorial park in the Ahuimanu Valley on the Windward side of Oahu with majestic volcanic mountains in the background, the Buddhist Temple is so like the original it can only be called "fabulous."

The temple and its related structures (a bell house, garden, shelters and ceremonial teahouse) cover seven acres of an eventual 45-acre Japanese section of the Memorial Park located in one of the most awesomely beautiful locations of Oahu.

Robert T. Katsuyoshi, famed for his authentic temple reproductions, was the chief architect, using plans provided him by the Japanese government though he also made a half dozen trips to Japan to study details of the original temple, now a Japanese National Monument. The temple, which has a prayer hall and two wings, is complemented by a two-acre reflecting pond and what is believed to be the largest Japanese garden complex ever built outside of Japan. The landscape artist was Kiichi Teoman-san of Kyoto. A five-foot tall, seven-ton brass bell has been installed in the garden bell house. Cast in Japan, it is of unique and impressive shape and issues forth an indescribably appealing sound.

BUDDHIST TEMPLE a nearly exact replica of the famed Byodo-in Buddhist temple near Kyoto, Japan. The temple and garden were planned with the assistance of all of Hawaii's bishops and mission leaders.

900 YEAR OLD TEMPLE

On View in Hawaii

GOLDEN BUDDHA OF BYODO-IN TEMPLE is an original work of art carved by the famous sculptor, Masuzo Inui of Kyoto. Standing more than 18 feet high, it is the culminating achievement of the temple. The figure is thought to be the largest Buddha in the United States.*

The bulk of the wooden components in the original temple were replaced here by some 3,000 concrete components, each especially cast to duplicate its component in Japan and "washed" with chemicals to give them their look of antiquity. The temple also has the largest made-in-Japan tile roof ever custom made for any structure in America with roof tiles 14,500 square feet in all, copied by Japanese craftsmen in Nagoya.

Within the Byodo-in Temple is the largest image of Buddha in the United States. Carved by Japan's most respected religious artist, Masuzo Inui, the figure is an original work of art commissioned especially for the Hawaii Byodo-in Temple. Beside being a magnificent sculpture, the Buddha also has great religious and historical significance.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever, and when a 900 year old temple of beauty is situated in beautiful Hawaii, its loveliness, significance and exquisite appeal promise to last at least another 900 years here . . . and surely that is forever?

Visitors planning to drive to the other side of the island are urged not to miss this magnificent structure. Just five minutes from the Wilson Tunnel, your simplest bet for specific directions is merely to ask at your hotel how to reach The Valley of The Temples . . . and miss it you will not want to, we guarantee! There is a small admission fee, for this feast for your eyes and wealth for your camera!
