Dear Mr. Williams:

Thank you for your letter of the 17th. Final examinations have prevented me from writing to you sooner. On behalf of my colleagues and students, and on my own account as well, I want to thank you for visiting and talking with us earlier this month. We all learned a great deal, both from the actual content of your talk and from the experience of having a serious and rational discussion with someone in your position. I do not think that there was anyone present who did not go away with the feeling that perhaps there are, after all, a few human beings in Washington.

Thank you again.

Sincerely,

Frank J. Leavitt, Ph.D.
