Films and Videotapes

The State Department distributes a four-part film series, "The History of U.S. Foreign Relations," and "From Where I Sit," an examination of how public opinion affects foreign policy decisions.

The History of U.S. Foreign Relations: Using actual locations, paintings, political cartoons, and documentary footage, this series of four 30-minute color films recreates the history of U.S. foreign relations from the American Revolution to mid-1975. "An Age of Revolutions" documents American diplomacy from the American Revolution through the Monroe Doctrine. "Youth to Maturity" traces the expansion of American interests and the evolution of the United States into a major world power prior to the events of World War I. "The Reluctant World Power" illustrates the increasing involvement of the United States in world affairs engendered by the events of the period between the wars. "The Road to Interdependence" outlines the development of U.S. foreign policy from the end of World War II through the onset of the 1970s.

From Where I Sit: This 30-minute film explores the many conflicting interests and opinions which converge on foreign policy issues and shape our national goals. Using the issues of trade, energy, and arms control, the film provides a basis for discussion of the kinds of decisions and choices confronting policymakers.

Videotapes

The Department also has available the following videotapes:

The Strategic Defense Initiative (25 minutes): Senior Administration officials explain the rationale for the Strategic Defense Initiative research program, including the basic technologies being investigated, how such a defensive system might protect us from a nuclear attack, and the relative deterrent value of offensive and defensive systems. Also included are discussions of Soviet space defense research, compliance with the ABM Treaty, the reaction of our NATO allies, and the Soviet attitude toward SDI at the Geneva arms control negotiations. This videotape may be supplemented with the Department's Special Report No. 129, The Strategic Defense Initiative, June 1985 (8 pp.).

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (17 minutes): A minidocumentary showing how the members of NATO have coped with the Soviet Union's military and political challenges since World War II. It also describes the overall organization of NATO and its military and political mechanisms.

An excellent Department publication to accompany this tape is the Atlas of NATO, February 1985 (24 pp.).

Nuclear Arms and Arms Control (25 minutes): A discussion of nuclear issues by a panel of Administration specialists questioned by a group of college students. The questions include U.S. objectives in arms control, the nuclear freeze proposal, and why the United States will not renounce the first use of nuclear weapons in the event of war in Europe. You may use this videotape in conjunction with the State Department publication A Short Guide to U.S. Arms Control, October 1984 (32 pp.).

Central America—The Search for Peace (27 minutes): A tape based on a day-long conference on Central America held at the Department of State. The economic, political, and military situation is discussed as well as U.S. policy and its results. You may supplement this tape with the Department's Atlas of the Caribbean Basin, July 1984 (20 pp.).
