Dicks Rout VC

The day was warm as the midafternoon sun beat down. What had been a quiet, routine day for the "ducks" on road security abruptly changed into a fire fight with a suddenly bold enemy.

One duck and a command jeep were set up just south of Sa Huynh on QL 1 when the driver of a civilian bus stopped and told the men that a truck had overturned two kilometers to the south.

"We immediately took off for the location," said Staff Sergeant James Neal, Kingsport Tennessee, "and as soon as we saw the truck we could see that an ambush had just occurred."

The  $2\frac{1}{2}$  ton truck carrying 20 flame throwers had overturned when it went out of control and ran up the side of a berm.

"We found a wounded GI near the berm, and he told us that the truck had been ambushed by 10 to 12 VC," said Specialist Four John Lewis, Boynton Beach, Florida.

Specialist Four Mary Jackson, Pleasure Ridge Park Ky quickly administered first aid to the wounded man and stayed with him until he could be dusted off.

Small arms fire from the high ground bordering the road made it evident that the VC were still close by. As Private First Class Render Johnson, Thomaston Georgia, returned fire with the duck's twin 7.62 caliber machine guns, Neal called in an accurate barrage of artillery rounds on the high ground. After a half hour of sporadic firing, the enemy broke contact.

Hill 56 overlooks an area of fertile rice paddies and small villes. Long a VC stronghold the district surrounding the hill was once presented a ciation by Ho Chi Minh for its efforts against South Vietnamese and American forces.

A ceremony 25 January marked the completion of the outpost atop the hill. The joint effort by Bravo Company and RF 147 was a major pacification effort in the Rice Bowl.

"The quick reaction by the men on the ducks undoubtedly prevented the VC from capturing the flame throwers," said Battalion Commander LTC Vernon B. Sones.

Patty—continued from page 1

For their role in the well constructed outpost, First Lieutenant Ken Kroeger San Antonio Texas, and his company were presented the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and Certificate of Achievement respectively.

The outpost, named Patty after Kroeger's wife, will be manned by elements of Bravo Company and RF 147.

In remarks to the men after the ceremony, Lieutenant Colonel Vernon B. Sones expressed his satisfaction in the well constructed bunkers and fighting positions. "Already we can see the beneficial results of your efforts as more and more land is being farmed around the hill," he told the men.

Shortimer Advice

Servicemen leaving the Army will now be aided in receiving assistance from the National Urban League Veterans Affairs Program.

The program provides advice on benefits available under the GI Bill and other Federal programs, counseling as to available educational and training programs, information about programs designed to assist in preparation for better job opportunities and other services.

Although the League's program is aimed primarily at minority group servicemen, all personnel may participate.

Under the new Army policy, servicemen within 90 to 120 days of separation who have decided not to reenlist will be advised by the Army that the League is assisting servicemen in their return to civilian life. The Veterans Administration and the Department of Defense also administer programs which benefit service men.

The program is voluntary and releasing names and other relevant information to the League will be done only with the serviceman's consent.

4-21 Recap

14Jan.—Bravo Company on OP Patty spotted 8-10 VC/NVA in the open moving south through the Rice Bowl. The enemy were engaged with machinegun fire and artillery. A Bravo Company SRRP team moving toward the enemy location sighted 10 VC in the open and again called in artillery on the enemy location.

16Jan.—Recon made contact with 7-10 VC/NVA on the beach northeast of Duc Pho. Gunships were called in and one platoon of C Co was inserted as a reaction force. An element of recon found one 4.2 round and one sand bag full of petna 30 meters from the contact site.

16Jan.—Alpha Company found a small base camp consisting of three bamboo and thatch hootches, one with a bunker inside. Clothing and propaganda leaflets were found scattered in the hootches.

22Jan.—On patrol in the mountains south of Duc Pho, Charlie Company made contact with two VC. The enemy were engaged with small arms fire and broke contact. A scout dog picked up the trail, and a short time later sounded an alert. Movement was spotted in the bushes to the front. The point element engaged with small arms fire, and immediately automatic AK47 fire returned. Two VC were then seen fleeing the area.

Alpha Finds Cave Complex

Hidden in the maze of a natural rock formation, the VC cave complex was virtually invisible until an Alpha Company patrol chanced upon it. Following the path of a stream that flowed past the rock formation, patrol leader Sergeant William Fischer, Anacortes, Washington, and his men spotted the entrance of the well concealed cave.

"We were working along the boundary of our AO and the 173rd's," said Alpha Company Commander Captain Mitchel Kotula, San Diego California. We knew from past experience that the VC like to store equipment along an AO boundary, so we were especially careful in searching the area."

Walking through the cave entrance, the "Gimlets" found a 200 meter long cavern that could accommodate up to 10<sup>2</sup> sleeping positions

"We found ammo cans filled with used gauze dressings and inoculation vials, which led us to believe that the cave had been used as a hospital," said Kotula.

The cavern was equipped with the convenience of running water--of sorts. Split and hollowed out bamboo shoots carried water from the stream to the cave.

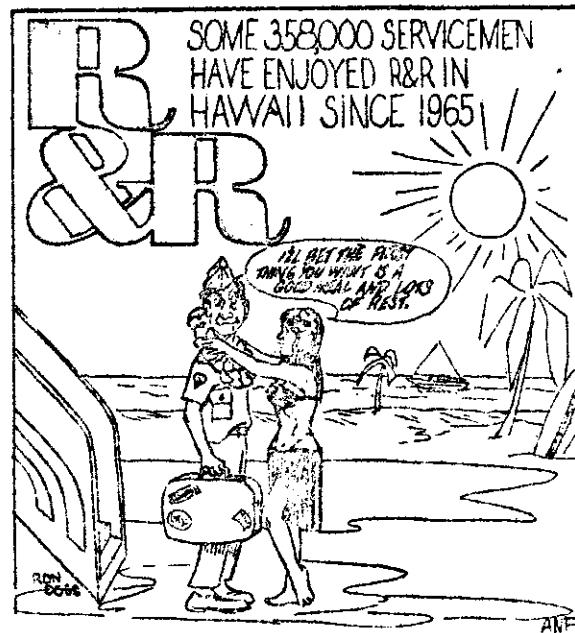

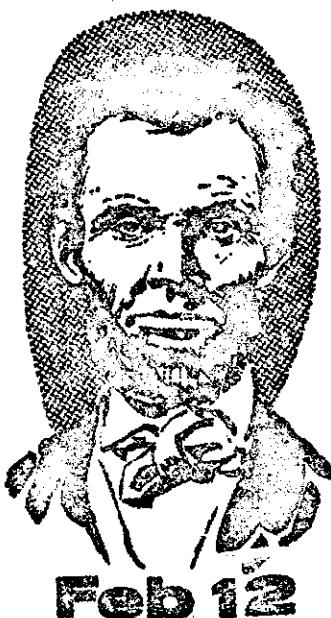

Documents, diaries, and various articles of equipment were found scattered throughout the cave. Still warm fire places indicated a hasty evacuation

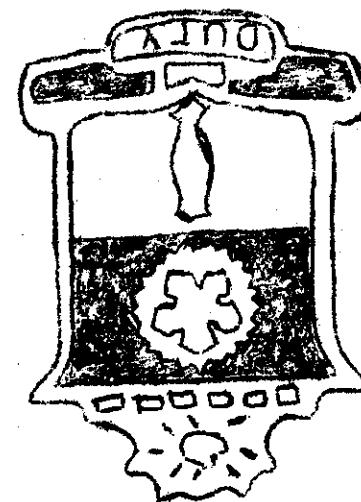

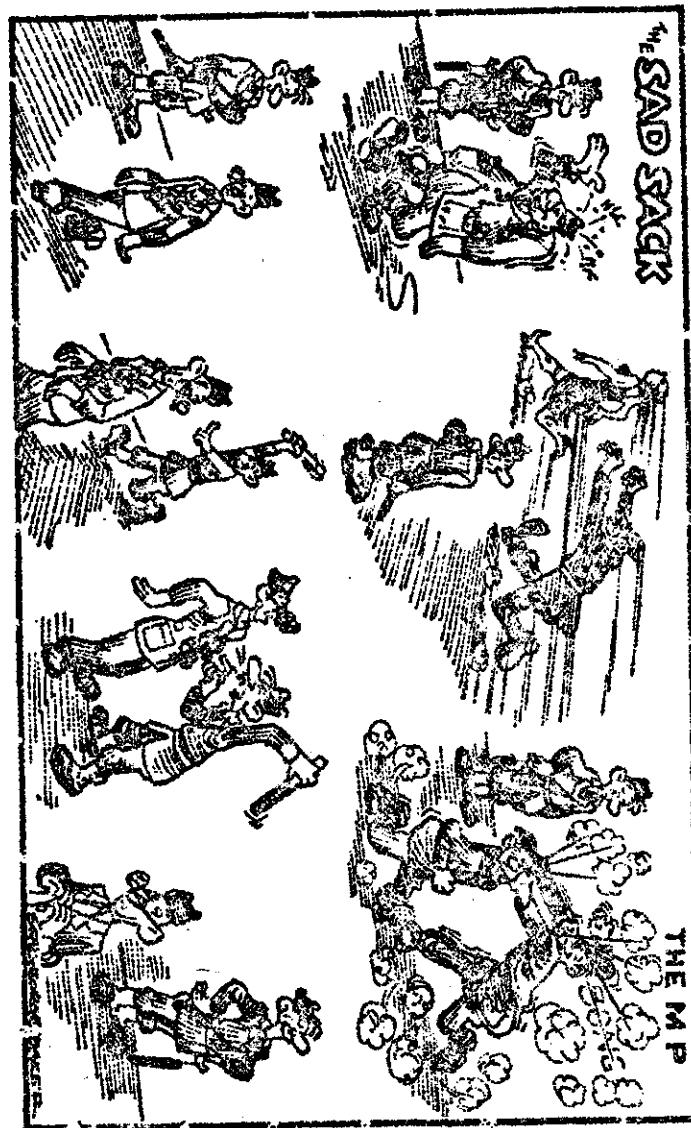

"We found one ammo can that was particularly interesting to everyone," said Kotula. It contained the personal items of a VC nurse, including love letters from her boy friend."
