SUBJECT: Monthly Report - July, 1967

Most of the month of July was spent in Luang Prabang, participating in a survey of the local population. I am afraid I must use the term rather loosely for my participation in the survey never grew beyond the role of driver and keeper of the payroll time sheets. As the survey progressed, my role as driver expanded to more than driving Mr. Bounchanh to and from work and I found myself making several inspection tours daily, checking on the progress of the work and insuring that no one was "loafing".

Perhaps I approached the situation incorrectly and never really convinced Mr. Bounchanh that I really there to help him in any way possible. In any case, I remained a timekeeper and driver throughout the month.

Generally this month passed uneventfully. The Pathet Lao only woke me up once and I had plenty of opportunity to study the Lao language.
