

REGION I

Region I, also known as the Red River Delta, is the largest and most densely populated region in Vietnam. It is located in the north of the country, between the Gulf of Tonkin to the east and the Laos border to the west. The region is divided into four provinces: Hanoi, Haiphong, Vinh, and Thanh Hoa.

REGION I

1. North Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Hanoi, Haiphong, Vinh, and Thanh Hoa. It is the most densely populated and economically developed region in the country.
2. Central Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Hue, Da Nang, and Hoi An. It is the most culturally diverse region in the country.
3. Southern Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Ho Chi Minh City, Ho Chi Minh City, and Ho Chi Minh City. It is the most economically developed region in the country.

REGION II

1. North Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Hanoi, Haiphong, Vinh, and Thanh Hoa. It is the most densely populated and economically developed region in the country.
2. Southern Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Ho Chi Minh City, Ho Chi Minh City, and Ho Chi Minh City. It is the most economically developed region in the country.
3. Central Vietnam: This region includes the provinces of Hue, Da Nang, and Hoi An. It is the most culturally diverse region in the country.

REGION III

1. Thakheh: This region includes the provinces of Ban Thakheh (VE 1020) and Ban Thakheh (VE 8627). It is the most densely populated and economically developed region in the country.

DISTR:

2000

2000

2000

2000 2000 2000 2000 2000 2000 2000 2000 2000 2000

2000

2000

2000

2000

2000

2000
2000
2000

