PRESSED INTO SERVICE

After almost 30 years, the Vietnamese party newspaper Nhan Dan has a new editor, Hoang Tung, well known for his lengthy briefings to foreign visitors, earlier this year handed over the editorship of the daily, which he is thought to have assumed in 1955, to Hong Ha, a virtually unknown figure who became an alternate member of the central committee at the fifth party congress. The change does not seem to signal a demotion, however, at the congress Tung was appointed to the important party secretariat, the 10-man body which handles day-to-day business for the politburo. Tung, who like many of his contemporaries in the Hanoi leadership was jailed by the French, holds a number of other important positions; among other things, he directs the central committee's propaganda and training department.
