Sixties Folk....

It's been pretty quiet out there, which I've been attributing to end-of-the-semester, start-of-the-summer winding down, but I'd like to see the list liven up again. In the first two weeks or so that we put SIXTIES-L on-line we had a spate of really wonderful introductions from subscribers. There were only about 100 people on the list at that time, and unfortunately our archival functions were not in place, so few folks got to read all those posts. Now there are about 350 subscribers to SIXTIES-L, all, I'm sure, with active interests in the subject. It would be great if we could all introduce ourselves (for a second time, if need be) and share our research interests with other SIXTIES-L members. This time it'll be "for the record," and we'll keep a special file of introductions which will be accessible to listmembers. This way new members may browse through the file and get a sense of the folks they are keeping virtual company with, and perhaps hook up with colleagues who have similar interests.

The purpose of this list is discussion and networking, so let's do it.
