8.(C) Intelligence:

a. Terrain: The terrain to the northwest of AN KHE is composed largely of very mountainous, rugged steep inclines, tapering off to moderate valleys and gentle lowlands. There are many secondary streams both intermittent and larger tributaries. In the northern portion of our AO the SONG BA RIVER makes its path down the main valley floor. The vegetation is thick, with occasional areas of bamboo thickets. Although there was dense undergrowth and much triple canopy jungle, there were areas where cleared areas and cultivated fields were quite prominent.

b. Weather: During the period we experienced the effects from the southwest monsoon. Afternoon rain showers were prevalent and evening thunder showers were prominent for the period. There were times when, due to the low cloud cover, it became impossible to fly in the AO. The temperature averaged 85° during the majority of the operation.

c. Enemy Situations: The area 12-15 kilometers northwest of AN KHE was expected to produce elements of the C2 Sapper Co. Although several contacts were made, there was no real evidence that the unit was actually operating in the area during our tenure there. We did, however, manage to find several small caches of food stuffs.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

Further to the north, 20 kilometers, we expected to find members of the GIA LAI Provincial Unit. There were numerous contacts where the VC/NVA appeared to have very stealthfully observed our movements and then capitalized on our mistakes. The enemy force appeared to be native, possibly VNC, who knew the trails and areas very thoroughly. Although several caches, to include one containing 2-3 tons of rice, and one containing 47 82mm mortar rounds complete with fuses, were found, there were never indications that more than a few enemy were in the area. Numerous bunkers and hootches in a deteriorated condition were found, to indicate use in the past. The area was also infested with punjii stakes, most of which were old.

9.(C)Mission: 2-35 Inf conducted aggressive search and destroy operations in A0 BUCK with OBJ DUMBO and high ground vic LZ WARRIOR as two initial objectives to destroy elements of C2 Co, 401st Sapper Bn.

On 30 May, 2-35 Inf conducted aggressive search and destroy operations in A0 PORSCHE to destroy members of the GIA LAI Provincial Unit.

On 18 Jun, 2-35 Inf moved into A0 SCHLITZ to locate & destroy 3d NVA Div HQ and rear service elements, locate and destroy enemy supply bases, and interdict enemy infiltration and supply routes.

10.(C)Concept of Operations: The operation was conducted in four phases:

a. Phase I: B Co conducted a CA into LZ WARRIOR, and secured LZ for construction of FSB; A,C,D Co's and Ron Plt conducted CA's into LZ's CUB, YANKEE, BREWER, and SENATOR, respectively. (ANNEX A)

b. Phase II: A,C,D Co's and Ron Plt conducted aggressive search and destroy operations in A0's SILK, LINEN, COTTON and RAYON, respectively. (ANNEX A)

c. Phase III: On 30 May, C Co conducted a CA and moved overland to OBJ DASH and secured it for construction of FSB LANCE; on 31 May, A,B,D Co's, Ron Plt and TAC CP conducted CA's into A0 PORSCHE and continued search and destroy operations in that A0. (ANNEX B)

d. Phase IV: on 18 Jun, A Co conducted a CA into LZ WELCH and secured it for the subsequent construction of FSB; B,C Co and Ron Plt conducted CA's into new A0's and continued search and destroy operations. (ANNEX C)

13.(C) Administrative Matters:

- a. Supply: Battalion trains was located at CAMP RADCLIFF, and a forward resupply point for emergency Class I and V was maintained at the forward fire base.
- b. Maintenance: Limited organizational maintenance was performed at the trains area, and items requiring repair beyond battalion capability were transferred to C Co, 704th Maint.
- c. Treatment of Casualties: Battalion aid stations were located at both the trains and forward fire base. Due to triple canopy jungle in the area of operation, a majority of the casualties had to be extracted with the jungle penetrator of the "Dustoff" helicopters. All casualties were evacuated to 17th Field Hospital at CAMP RADCLIFF.
- d. Transportation: The availability of aircraft for resupply and operations was not a problem; however, bad flying weather very frequently caused delay.
- e. Communications: The only communications problems occurring during this operation was due to terrain and weather. This problem was alleviated by relaying between units.

14. (C) Special Equipment and Techniques: The PPS-4 Radar set was employed with great success on FSB WARRIOR and FSB LANCE. Also, the CRC/463 Multiplex radio provided continuous 4-channel communications with BDE and the rear area in CAMP RADCLIFF.

15. (C) Commanders Analysis:

a. Enemy: Throughout the operation the numerous contacts were characterized by sniper fire, ground-to-air fire and harassing ground fire in proximity to resupply landing zones. Fresh trails or well-packed infiltration trails were virtually non-existent, yet the enemy appeared to move freely through the AO, thus, concluding that we were opposed by indigenous Montagnard and Vietnamese VC.

b. Tactics Employed: To meet the challenge of a knowledgeable and cunning enemy, the companies employed a greater variety of stay-behind ambushes, more early warning devices and an increased number of OP/LP's. To reduce the influx of helicopters into the area, units walked into their AO's rather than conduct combat assaults. On one occasion, B Co(-) conducted a final extraction while 1st platoon moved overland to the PZ to establish a stay-behind ambush. D Co trailed behind A Co to determine if the enemy was searching abandoned night locations. Trip flares and smoke grenades were placed along trails which could be observed from FSB LANCE to pick up any movement and defensive artillery targets were pre-planned on each trip wire location.
