Dear Dr. Heinrichs,

I am a former participant in your US in world affairs course, and am presently trying to understand our involvement in Southeast Asia. I am currently reading Kahin and Lewis, The United States in Vietnam, a fascinating book, but one that seems to lack objectivity in spots. I feel the need to read something more pro-Administration, but have found nothing that looks really reliable.

If you have time, I would appreciate any suggestions of ways that I can most efficiently direct my study of this problem. Also, how do you feel about the Kahin and Lewis book?
