

Vol. 1, No. 5 61st INF. REGT. FORT CARSON, COLO., 29 OCT. 1954

Major Massey New Regimental S-3

Maj. Fred N. Massey became the new Regt'l S-3 Officer Oct. 13 as Capt. James Bailey becomes the full-time Regt'l S-2.

Coming to the 61st RCT from Task Force No. 7, where he helped plan the first hydrogen bomb test at Eniwetok, Maj. Massey has served in Korea and in Europe during World War II.

In 1939 Maj. Massey enlisted in the Army and worked up to the rank of Master Sergeant before accepting a battlefield commission in 1945. He received his promotion to Major in 1951.

The 34 year old Major from Shamrock and Big Springs, Texas, is married to the former Katy Gilmore of Big Springs. Maj. Massey attended Texas A&M near Waco before enlisting in the Army. He was with the 3rd Div. during the Second World War and has had parachute training.

Among his decorations are the CIB with star, three Silver Stars, three Bronze Stars, five Purple Hearts, the French Croix de Guerre and the Korean Distinguished Service Cross.

Other staff assignments during the past two weeks show two new First Lieutenants reported into the Regiment Oct. 27. Neither was assigned—at press time. They are 1/Lt. Robert A. Vogel, who came from the 3rd Div. in Korea where he served as the PX Officer, and 1/Lt. Robert D. Williams, who came from the 24th Div. in Korea.

First Lt. Warren E. Johnson has been transferred from Co. F to Headquarters 2nd Bn. with duties as S-2; 2/Lt. Jerry W. Clark has been reassigned to Hqs. & Hqs. Co. with duties as a Platoon leader, and 2/Lt. John A. Garner was transferred from Hqs. & Hqs. Co. to Hqs. Co. 2/Bn. with duties as the Bn. Commo Officer.

Maj. Edward Craney has assumed the duties of Provisional Battalion Commander, replacing Capt. Carl E. Windough, for administration purposes only.

Who Needs the Key?

The key to a lock attached to a missing paint shed from the 61st Chapel will be given to the men who took the shed if they will come and get it.

The paint shed, a modest 6x4x4, and all of the equipment in it disappeared sometime during the night, two weeks ago, Chap. (Capt.) Joseph V. Watterson, the Regt'l Chaplain, stated recently.

Most of the equipment stored in the shed—including paint, brushes and cleaning equipment—was bought from the Chaplain's fund, which is never too large.

The Chaplain's comment: "Let him that stole, steal no more (Eph. 4:28) and come get the key to the lock."

Regiment Takes Part In Two Searches

Two different searches involving men of the 61st RCT were carried on last week as men from F, G, H, Hqs. Co. 2/Bn., and Medical Companies helped locate a 2 1/2 year old boy lost near Peterson Field and a Doctor lost in the mountains south of Lake City, Colo.

The first search, for young Jimmie Hogan, started about 1500 hours Oct. 18 and continued until the lad was found aleep by a fence near Peterson Field around

BAKER COMPANY SOLDIER WINS POST ART CONTEST

Pfc. Byron Reed of Co. B won first place in the Post Art Contest held at the Culture Center recently.

Winning a $20 prize for his achievement, Pfc. Reed will represent Fort Carson in the 5th Army competition in Mid-December.

Pfc. Reed is the company artist and is used throughout the Regiment for sign painting and art work. Some of his work has appeared in the "Six-Ace".

61st Inf. Men Receive Artillery Training

Lessons learned in combat, both in World War II and in the Korean campaign, have pointed out the need of training individual infantrymen to act as "eyes" for the artillery whenever necessary, according to Maj. Fred N. Massey, Big Spring, Tex., head of the plans and training section of Fort Carson's 61st Infantry Regiment.

To fill this need, each of the three regiments of the 8th Infantry "Golden Arrow" Division are scheduled to train their officers and key non-commissioned officers in the art of accurately guiding the fire of the big guns onto targets which the artillerymen themselves cannot see.

The 61st, with the cooperation of the 56th Field Artillery Battalion, has already begun teaching its officers, platoon sergeants and squad leaders how to do this.

The need for the infantryman to aid the artillery arises in cases where he is the only one in a position to see where the artillery fire is landing in relation to the target.

In such cases, the infantryman, can communicate by radio or telephone with the artillery battery which is in support and give the necessary range and deflection changes to bring the artillery fire on its target.

The "how" is what the 61st and the other infantry regiments at Carson will be teaching their key personnel.

The program now in operation at the 61st involves both classroom instruction and practical field work. In the classroom, the men will re-familiarize themselves with the operation of various types of radios and field telephones and brush up on radio procedure.

In the field, they will work a "puff-board," which represents, in miniature, the area which a battery of artillery can effectively cover with fire. They will guide simulated artillery rounds onto "puff-board" targets.

The key personnel taking the course will pass their knowledge on to the men of the 61st. Eventually, every man in the regiment should know how to operate as a "seeing-eye" for artillery fire.

Studying the route of travel between Carson and Camp Irwin, Calif., prior to their move last Wednesday are 2/Lt. Donald Styron, Sfc. Raymond Ridgeway, M/Sgt. Alden Jobe, Sfc. Henry Antone, 2/Lt. Ronald Styron and Capt. Robert Nevins, the CO.

Tank Co. left this week for Camp Erwin, Calif., to participate in the annual tank gunnery range season with other tank units of the 8th Div.

Commanded by Capt. Robert H. Nevins, the company has been undergoing extensive training in preliminary gunnery instruction and in company and platoon tactical field exercises for the past six weeks.

While at Camp Edwin, located in the southern California desert, the company will receive additional training in gunnery, company and platoon tactical firing exercises, communications and maintenance training, tank crew proficiency exercises, communications and maintenance training, tank crew proficiency exercises and tank-infantry team work.
