Mademoiselle Lowen,

Maraming salamat sa ~~inyo~~ inyo sa ~~inyong~~ inyong
tulong sa pag-aaral ko ~~na~~ nang salitang "FRENCH".
Talagang nag-enjoy ako sa klase ninyo.

Hindi ako makapaniwala na ako ay mata-

Principal

Vernon Clarkson

With the close of school this year we find our community in Udorn, Thailand much smaller than at this time last year. Though our school has fewer students, the teaching staff has remained at sixteen, providing a highly advantageous teacher-pupil ratio of 1 to 10. This staff has made a concerted effort to prepare each of you for the next step in the progression of your schooling.

Your accomplishments throughout the term have been commendable. The few adversities that temporarily interrupted classes served only to increase our appreciation for the normal and healthy routine we have enjoyed in the past and hopefully will continue to enjoy in the future.

It is important to remember that summer vacation is not a period when learning stops. The world around you is an open classroom and as guests in a foreign country, you must treasure each experience. Very few of your peers in the States will have the opportunity that is presently available to you.

The Air America School was established in order to provide educational opportunities to the children of parents who, by their association with Air America, the U.S. Military, or U.S. Government contractors, are required to be stationed in or near the Udonthani, Thailand area.

Your parents have contributed a large measure to the accomplishments of several of the many United States Government programs designed to promote the development of several host countries in Southeast Asia. In the same sense you, too, can take pride in the extent to which you may have taken advantage of the educational opportunities made available to you at the Air America School. I particularly wish to emphasize the opportunities provided by the extra-curricular activities, which afford the opportunity to leave the confines of the school and to gain an appreciation of the people and environment of Thailand—an appreciation which I feel certain is fully reciprocated by our Thai hosts.

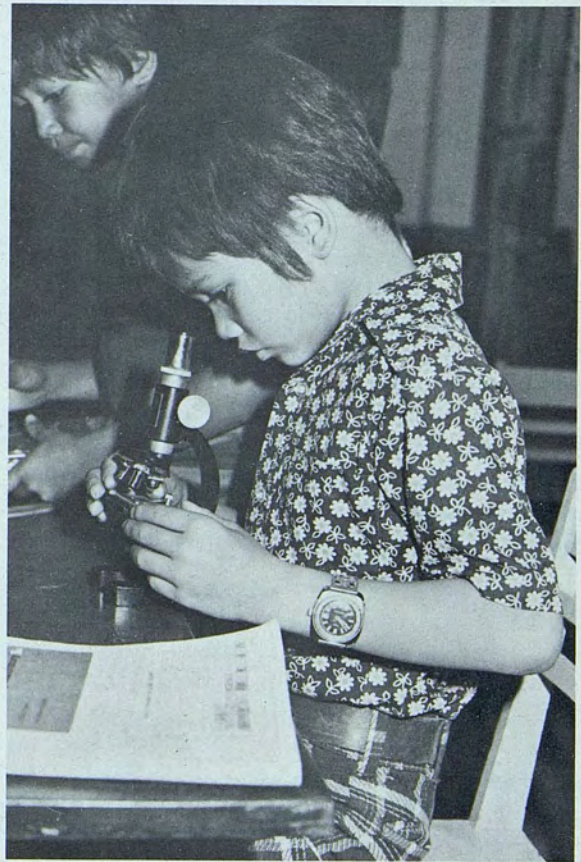

It gives me a particular pleasure, as it has for a number of years in the past, to compliment the entire Air America School student body on its achievements this year and to extend to each one of you my best wishes for your future endeavors.

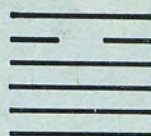

C. J. Abadie, Jr.

Vice President's Message

I Ching (Book of Changes)
Ka - Ten - Tai - Yu
The cycles change
Luck, Freedom and Hope
for new beginnings

Time moves continuously
like the Chinese dragon--symbol of change.
Nothing remains still . . . All things grow, change, vary and pass through metamorphosis
in search of perfection.
At Air America School we enter, grow and leave on our own quest for perfection.

Times change; people change. The concept of wings brings forth the ideas of change, the ideas of transition, the concepts of life itself. Being in school is a process not unlike metamorphosis, in which we grow and change. "Wings" is meant to dramatize the changes we experience at Air America School.

Look at an egg, or a cocoon--there is dormant, yet pulsating life in the innocuous casing; life is ready to burst out in gradual degrees of glory. When the caterpillar emerges from its chrysalis it is no longer a lowly worm--it has gained its wings, its spurs of glory. For a bird such as the swan beauty develops gradually as it passes through times of helplessness, times of anger, frustration. fear. Finally, the ungainly cygnet becomes a beautiful creation, with its wings spread in victorious flight.

WINGS

Wings make birds look graceful and beautiful. When birds fly the wind catches their wings and they glide whichever way the wind is blowing. Many different kinds of birds have many colors on their wings. Wings give birds freedom. They are the only way of transportation and catching its prey. Men have copied birds' wings and have invented airplanes and jets.

The eagle is our symbol of America and we should not kill eagles or any other kinds of birds. People like to catch birds and keep them for pets, and think it's just wonderful, but it really isn't. They should let them have their freedom. In zoos they clip their wings so they can't fly away. All they do is sit and swim while people watch them all day. Instead of that they could be in the air flying and gliding, enjoying freedom.

Wings for War

Having wings is the best of all.
It is fun when you are small.

If I'm in trouble away I go,
Flying high and flying low.

If I'm gonna have a war,
I will fly very far.

If they make me fly and fly,
I will poke them in the eye.

I'll fly away, away and then come back.
Then they'll give me one hard wack.

Then I gave them a candy bar,
Then they said let's end the war.

The wings of birds ends the rhyme.
Oh! I forgot. It's flying time.

Man's curiosity has led him to wings. Men have always dreamed of flight. All peoples have their mythical creatures symbolizing flight-- the Garuda, Isis and Pegasus are a few.

Flight is ultimate freedom. Man can experience true flight only within his own mind, through the medium of his imagination. The product is myth.

In high school we learn to free our imagination, to create our own myth, our own vision of flight.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

Seventh grade starts the day by running out to the field in PE shorts—baggy on the girls, tight on the boys. R-I-P!!! We pick a game and play for an hour and then run to science.

Debbie always loved to learn about guts just before lunch . . .

VERSATILITY

The eighth grade day starts with PE, which indicates how active most of us have been in sports this year. Robin and Liz were both on the girls' tennis team. Wayne, our hero, was on the football team. He did quite well. He pulled about 10 flags in the three games.

In Math with Mr. McElroy second period we have two smart ones, Andy and Steve. For the third quarter Steve got three 100s out of four tests.

As we enter Mr. Montross's class we hear a prerecorded message saying "USE THIS CRITERIA . . . CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER."

When we finish lunch we go to Science where we are engaged in either projects or arguments.

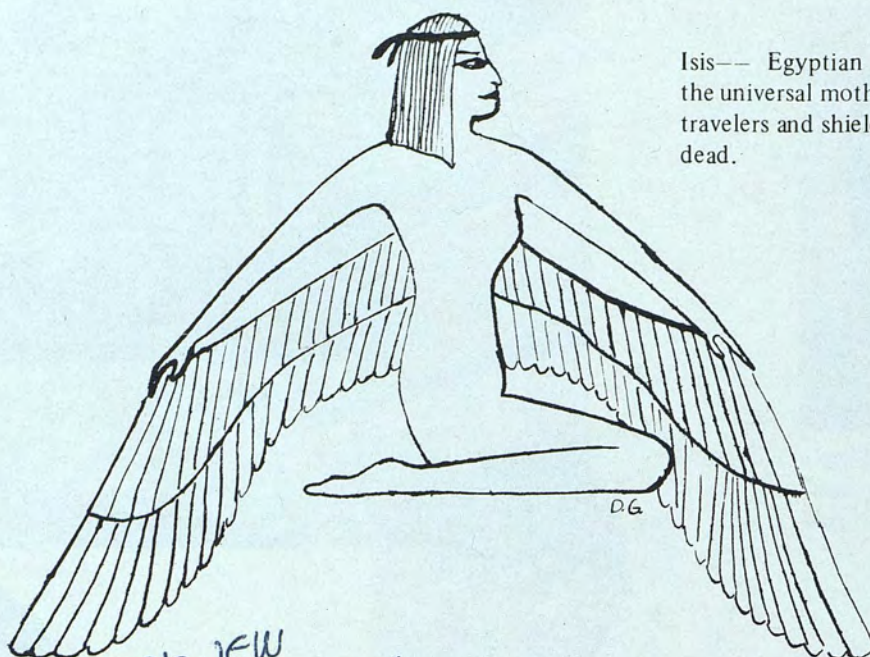

Last period we thank Mrs. Richie for trading us, two years in a row, to Miss Cowan for English. But before she left, we did put on a Christmas play. Everyone in the class participated to answer "IS CHARLIE BROWN REALLY A BLOCKHEAD?" (YES!—but he picked a good tree anyway.) Larry, our peripatetic photographer, was Charlie Brown.

Also in the Peanuts gallery was Allyson, definitely the quietest person in our class. But she did carry a very large pack up Mt. Phukradung (most of the way). Then there is Bob, who has been a major asset in keeping the social and philosophical development of our class "CENSORED."

Miss Cowan,

It's really been lots of fun this year, even though I didn't have you very long. Remember all the fun we've all had this year. Well, as they say, all good things must come to pass, and so we all go our separate ways. Good luck and lots of happiness in whatever you decide to do after you leave. I'm sure it'll be a great one.

Wings possess great beauty. They enable creatures to flutter, waver, zoom and glide. They can bring creatures to great heights.

I would like to have wings. Great, enormous wings, hooked above my arms to enable me to flutter, waver, zoom and glide. I'd feel the rushing sensation of air tearing past me and my wings would slice through the air as a knife in soft butter. To great heights I would fly, over lands, seas and mountains, and I would find all the knowledge and secrets of the world.

But the most important thing for me is for my mind to have wings. Wings to fly me to my every little thought and to all abstractions of ideas. Wings that would flutter, waver, zoom and glide higher than any mountain. Wings to part the dense fog that settles over my memory. Wings to show my mind's eye more creative things than a human eye could see.

There are many different types of wings. Wings that transport creatures, wings that could actually carry me, and wings to fly my mind and soul higher than a kite. Yet they all seem to do the same thing: to flutter, waver, zoom and glide.

The phoenix is a universal symbol of rebirth. In Egyptian mythology the phoenix rises from the ashes of its own consuming fire, to start a new cycle of existence. In Chinese Yin – Yang mythology the phoenix (eternal life) is coupled with the dragon (constant change). This union creates a harmonic balance of opposites.

Life is change; school is a cycle of growth from child to adult.
we enter a new phase of growth, a new cycle.

We seek new freedom,
new experience . . .
A new vision of flight . . .

EDUCATION

Perhaps the most valuable result of all education is the ability to make yourself do the things you have to do, when they ought to be done, whether you like it or not. This is the first lesson to be learned.

Ms. Cowan,

MISS COWAN,

TO A REAL FINE teacher I've enjoyed so much in French and Typing. You're really a wonderful teacher and you were as you well knew my BEST TEACHER This Year.
Good luck in EVERY thing you do Miss
Cowan, good people like you deserve the BEST FUTURE in what ever you do!
