

Clifford Briefed on 1st Day In City Braced for Attack

S&S Vietnam Bureau

SAIGON — In the uneasy atmosphere of a city awaiting a new Communist attack, U.S. Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford spent his first day in Vietnam Monday on a busy round of secret briefings with American military and State Department officials.

Clifford was expected to meet Tuesday with South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu in a preliminary to Thieu's conference with President Johnson later this week in Hawaii.

The secretary and his party moved through the city under strict security Monday as rumors of an impending attack mounted.

U.S. officials in Saigon said that as a security measure details of Clark's movements in Vietnam would be released only "after the fact."

Clifford and his party spent most of the day in the U.S. Embassy, for talks with Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and other officials on the political and economic situations, and at the "Pentagon East", U.S. Military Assistance Command Headquarters of Gen. Creighton W. Abrams.

As the secretary was briefed, there were unofficial reports that two Communist brigades had marched more than 200 miles from the Central Highlands to join what are believed to be elements of four Red divisions already poised in the vicinity of Saigon for an attack on the capital.

Clifford and his party were expected to spend at least part of Tuesday in Saigon, then head for inspection tours in various parts of the country.

Aside from the tough security precautions, Clifford's first visit to Vietnam has been marked by an almost total lack of pomp and demonstration on the part of the Vietnamese government, which a month ago gave a rousing reception to Australia's Prime Minister John Gorton. An all-American reception committee awaited the defense chief Sunday night at Tan Son Nhut airport, and while the Vietnamese press has given him top play, Clifford's visit so far has been quietly accepted by Saigon officials.

With the secretary are Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Assistant Secretary of State William P. Bundy, Assistant Defense Secretaries Phil G. Goulding and Paul Warnke, Air Force Maj. Gen. John B. McPherson, Vice Director of the Joint Staff, and Charles W. Havens, Clifford's special assistant.

Hanoi Gets Serious In Coffee Breaks

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnamese peace delegation said Monday that some questions brought up at the Paris talks are also being discussed at informal "coffee breaks" during the sessions.

Nguyen Thanh Le, the North Vietnamese spokesman, told a news conference that "on rare occasions" serious matters have been talked about. Up to now, the North Vietnamese have been reporting that only irrelevant chit-chat about the health, travel plans and housing difficulties of the delegation members came up.

Le said Monday that at the July 3 meeting, U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman had reiterated in these informal talks his thanks for the decision of the North Vietnamese government to release three more American airmen and that this subject was discussed. There was still no word on when the Americans would actually be let go.

Le said that his delegation had made no agreement with the U.S. delegation about not reporting what goes on in the coffee breaks. He said that he was willing to tell reporters all about them. The U.S. delegation has refused to report on these intermittent talks in the hope that these could develop into private discussions which delegation members believe are the only kind which can lead to concrete developments.

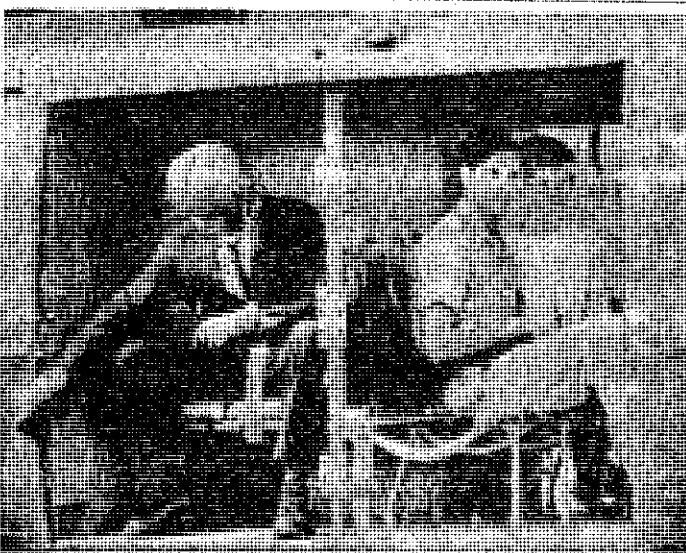

The North Vietnamese spokesman said that two months of talks in Paris had not brought "a ray of hope."

Takes Newlyweds to Honeymoon Hut

Copter Gives Cupid a Lift

CHU LAI, Vietnam (UPI)—A helicopter that usually lifts wounded men from battle Saturday carried a pair of newlyweds to their honeymoon hut, and the pilot could not have been happier.

In his months in South Vietnam, CWO 2 Norman Shanahan, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., has been shot down twice while trying to remove wounded Americans from the fighting zone. Each time CWO 2 Don Sewell, 22, of San Antonio, swooped out of the sky to rescue him.

Shanahan returned the favors Saturday. He chauffeured Sewell and his new wife, Capt. Patricia H. Mann, 24, an Army nurse, of Washington, to their new home and a gala reception.

The bride wore white and the helicopter had "just married" painted on its nose.

Sgt. J.C. Carnello Arria volunteered to cook the food for a reception and Chaplain Donald Kinney, of Syracuse, N.Y., obtained South Vietnamese Boy Scouts to act as altar boys for the church service.

Maj. Patrick Grady, of Seattle, Wash., agreed to be the best man and Maj. Kenneth Cass, of Waterbury, Conn., gave the bride away.

First Lt. Kathleen Waggoner, of Raceland, La., was the bridesmaid.

"I roomed with Sewell through flight school and he has pulled me out twice after I was shot down," Shanahan said. "It was real great flying him from the wedding."

A house resting on a bluff above the South China Sea reflects what the other men of the 54th Medical Evac. Det. think of the Silver Star winning helicopter ambulance pilots.

It is a three-room affair decked with air conditioners and stereo.

"It is fantastic," Sewell's new wife said. "It has everything a bride could want."

This will be the home of Sewell and his wife who works as a nurse at the 2nd Surgical Hospital for the next nine months.

"The people in the unit scrounged all the materials for the house and built it," Sewell said. "It was a fine wedding present."

Even with the rank difference, however, there is no question who will be the boss of the household. "I am only the Mrs.," the captain said. "He (the warrant officer) wears the pants."

New Thai CO Lands in Viet

S&S Vietnam Bureau

SAIGON — Maj. Gen. Chalard Hirunstri, the incoming commander of Royal Thai forces in Vietnam, arrived in Saigon Monday.

He was greeted at Tan Son Nhut Airport by officers and men of Thailand's Army, Navy and Air Force, and leaders of the Free World Military Assistance Command.

After a review of his troops, he was officially welcomed to Vietnam by Lt. Gen. T. N. T. Tuan, chairman of the Free World Military Assistance Working Committee.

Hirunstri, who will take command of the Thai troops July 25, said his men "will devote themselves in every way, even with their lives, to bring peace to this country."

Thailand's strength in Vietnam will increase significantly during Hirunstri's year as commander. The Army's 10,000-man Black Panther Div. is to arrive next month.
