

Frank Piasecki of Philadelphia flew the second practical helicopter in the U.S., the PV-2, and the world's first successful tandem rotor helicopter, the XHRP-X.

Piasecki PV-2 (1943)

Philadelphia is the birthplace of rotary-wing aviation in the western hemisphere. We Americans are proud of the progress – from the autogiro to the tandem, heavy lift helicopters to the tiltrotor – over the past 70 years. The American Helicopter Museum is to be a world class museum to preserve the heritage of rotary wing technology for future generations. Join me in becoming a Charter Member today. Let's go!

The Museum

The American Helicopter Museum & Education Center in Philadelphia, PA will be the premiere rotary-wing preservation and exhibition center in the world. Unlike other aviation museums, this facility will cater exclusively to rotary-wing aviation equipment, technology, legend and art. The Museum will attract domestic and international visitors with its collection of historically significant rotorcraft, interactive exhibits, publicly accessible restoration center and educational programs and activities.

The Museum is chartered to preserve the heritage of rotary-wing aviation, arrest the loss of artifacts, and provide a center for forums, ceremonies and special events

Pioneer Hall honors major contributors to the art and science of rotary wing aviation

The most time critical of element of the museum charter is to ..."arrest the loss of rotary wing artifacts." As each year passes, many valuable and interesting pieces of hardware, tools, notes and books, photographs and even memories are lost. The Museum will preserve these treasures, by actively gathering and by serving as a focus for gifts and loans.

It is imperative that everyone in the industry participates, to insure that The Museum is the premiere facility of its kind in the world.
