Part one of the video is narrated and documents North Vietnam's invasion of "I Corps" area in March 1972. It highlights the efforts by South Vietnamese soldiers in conjunction with American close air support, naval gunfire (ANGLICO) and ground advisors to repulse the invasion. On 30 March 1972, 17 Infantry Divisions, 3 artillery divisions and 2 armored divisions of the North Vietnamese Army regulars launched a massive attack against Dong Ha, Quang Tri and Hue. Produced by the Navy Department this film examines the problems encountered in retaking the area.

Looks at close are support provided by Navy and Marine aircraft (fixed wing and helicopter) aboard USS Kittyhawk and USS Constellation. Examines naval gunfire support (USS Newport News) and Marines in the field directing the fire.

Part two is not narrated. The focus is Military Region II. It has captions and a music soundtrack. This portion covers a wide array of events, featuring the U.S. Air Force, Army and Navy, as well as, South Vietnamese Army units during April and May of 1972. Includes the 82nd Artillery, ships off-loading supplies at Da Nang, Scenes at Kontum, 2nd ARVN Hospital, evacuation of refugees by American helicopters, and much more.

Naval Reserves 1960s-1970s

Three films on the video highlighting the job of Naval Reserves and Naval Air Reserves in the 1960s and 1970s. The first film, "Naval Reserve Call-Up in 1961," looks at reservists called up to staff 40 destroyers and destroyer escorts and 18 reserve Anti-Submarine Warfare aircraft squadrons in 1961. Includes footage of USS Tingey and USS Wiseman, and of training of the Vietnamese Navy junk force. The second film is called "Certain Breed" and follows Naval Air Reserve Air Wing 20 in 1971 aboard USS John F. Kennedy. The third film is called "Business Is Good" and also focuses on the Naval Air Reserve.

Indepth Information About This Video

NAVAL RESERVE CALL UP IN 1961

Titled "Cold War Call-Up - The Navy's Selected Reserve," this film opens with comments on the Cold War by President John F. Kennedy. On July 27, 1961 Congress authorized the involuntary call-up of 8,000 Selected Naval Reservists. Forty reserve destroyers and destroyer escorts and 18 reserve ASW aircraft squadrons were called to active duty. All were ready for service by October 7, 1961. Views of S2F and P2V aircraft, reserve DDs and DEs, including USS TINGEY (DD 539) and USS WISEMAN (DE 667), and visits to Germany and Pearl Harbor are shown. Other scenes are of underway refueling of ships and training of the Vietnamese Navy junk force. In July 1962, the reserve ships and aircraft returned to their homeports and on August 1 the recalled personnel were released from active duty. Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth closes with his comments on the great contribution the reserves made to the nation's security. Review by Cmdr. Al Grobmeier, USN Retired

"Certain Breed"

Filmed aboard USS John F. Kennedy (CVA-67) in August 1971, this film documents the first time a Naval Air Reserve attack wing (1,200 pilots and support personnel) went aboard a carrier as a group.

Featuring A-4 Skyhawks, F-8 Crusaders and E-1B Tracers, the video offers a behind-the-scenes look at reserve pilots and their crews preparing for missions, and ordnancemen handling live bombs for the first time.

Includes excellent scenes of Kennedy's flight deck, CIC, bridge, as well as some below-deck compartments, such as sleeping quarters. Includes pilot briefings and comments by Admiral Howard E. Greer.

Three films. Marines 1968 looks at Marine activity worldwide, and documents the long and bloody fighting at Khe Sanh and Hue, as well as scenes filmed at Marine Air Station, El Toro. The Legacy Program examines the Marines' Combined Action Platoons through the idealistic perspective of a young Marine sergeant. Operation Baxter Gardens is silent and unedited film footage taken of the 1st Marine Division near Hue City and An Hoa.

Indepth Information About This Video

Marines 1968 Produced by the Marine Corps in 1970, this video highlights the long hard bloody fighting at Khe Sanh. The video also includes clips of other Marine activities around the world in 1968. Starting with Khe Sanh in northeastern Quang Tri Province where the besieged 26th Marines sustained a 77 day North Vietnamese siege, the action is hot and furious. The Marines are seen fighting with all the force and tenacity they are renowned for. Endure the seige, experience incoming North Vietnamese fire that force the men to take cover. Watch as fighters run air strikes on the North Vietnamese just out beyond the perimeter wire, and be there as resupply aircraft endured a hazardous approach into the combat base's airfield. See twisted remains of C-123 Provider transport, CH-46 Sea Knight and CH-53 Sea Stallion helicopters. Witness the airfield under attack as a C-130 Hercules transport starts its take-off roll through the drifting dust from an exploding artillery shell. The video also includes graphic scenes at Hue where other Marines were committed to the deadly house-to-house, street-to-street fighting. Witness the Marines slowly clearing the former Imperial Capital. View observer fighter aircraft attacking North Vietnamese positions in the city itself. Additional footage shows elements of Regimental Landing Team 27 at El Toro, California being personally seen off by President Lyndon B. Johnson. Subsequent footage shows the landing team later in the year preparing to depart Vietnam and its welcome home parade in San Diego, California. Operations Kentucky II, Lancaster II, Swift Play II, and Meade River are covered in action packed combat footage from the perspective of the Marine in the field. There is also film footage of the Marines shutting down the Khe Sanh combat base where everything was destroyed. Operation Baxter Gardens is silent, unedited film footage, approximately 20 minutes total. It shows the 1st Marine Division near Hue City and An Hoa in April and May 1968. Legacy Program: Produced by the Marine Corps in the late 1960s, this film examines the Marines highly successful Combined Action Platoons, through the idealistic perspective of a young Marine sergeant who is dictating a tape to his parents explaining why he planned to extend his tour in Vietnam to remain with the platoon he commanded. The Combined Action Program, of which the platoons were a part of, started provisionally at Phu Bai in the summer of 1965. And the full fledge expansion of the Combined Action Company concept took place at Da Nang in January 1966. This program lasted until May 7, 1971 when the last Combined Action Platoon was withdrawn from Quang Nam Province's, Dien Ban District. Through both narrative and film the mission of the Combined Action Platoon and its interaction with both Vietnamese villagers and Popular Forces is seen. Militarily, the Marines are seen training villagers to defend their village from the Viet Cong. They are seen preparing for an ambush against insurgents. Marines are seen helping them with livestock and improving their villages sanitation. Their is also a clip of a village child being treated by a doctor at the Navy's hospital at Da Nang. For those interested in experiencing another aspect of the Marine Corps

Indepth Information About This Video

Operation Dewey Canyon: Produced by the Marine Corps in 1969, this film presents one of the corps' most difficult and exacting helicopter assaults of all time. In a helicopter assault launched in January 1969 from the Vandegrift combat base, the 9th Marines assaulted by CH-46 Sea Knight helicopters into the Da Krong Valley in I Corps where a North Vietnamese buildup along Route 548 leading from Laos had been detected. Good footage of the 9th Marines assaulting into the valley where they secured landing zones Razor and Riley and established fire support base Razor. Three companies of the regiment's 3d Battalion are seen moving to establish fire support base Cunningham where a 155mm howitzer is fired. A company is seen attacking the site for fire support base Erskine. Tiger Mountain is finally captured. Elements of the 3d Reconnaissance Battalion move through the operational area, and the fresh 2d Battalion, 3d Marines arrive at Erskine. This film contains excellent footage of Marine Corps fighters in support of Operation Dewey Canyon. Footage of F-4 Phantoms and A-4 Sky Hawks in action. There is extensive CH-46 footage, with CH-53 Sea Stallions and UH-1 Huey helicopters seen in various clips. Legacy Program: Produced by the Marine Corps in the late 1960s, this film examines the Marines' highly successful Combined Action Platoons, through the idealistic perspective of a young Marine sergeant who is dictating a tape to his parents explaining why he planned to extend his tour in Vietnam to remain with the platoon he commanded. The Combined Action Program, of which the platoons were a part of, started provisionally at Phu Bai in the summer of 1965. Marines are seen helping them with livestock and improving their villages' sanitation. There is also a clip of a village child being treated by a doctor at the Navy's hospital at Da Nang. For those interested in experiencing another aspect of the Marine Corps' experience in Vietnam or a veteran wanting to relive his experiences as part of a Combined Action Platoon this film is for you.

USS Grayback (LPSS-574)

This video contains unedited film footage of USS Grayback shot in 1970. The submarine was re-classified from a guided missile submarine to an amphibious transport submarine with hull classification symbol LPSS on 30 August 1968. The conversion heightened her sail by ten feet, added two auxiliary tanks to the forward end of the engine room (increasing the length of the boat by 12 feet), and, most significantly, converted the missile chambers to carry 67 embarked troops and SEAL Swimmer Delivery Vehicles (SDVs), including a decompression chamber in the starboard hangar. In June 1972, the Grayback carried a team of Navy seals into the coastal waters of North Vietnam as part of Operation Thunderhead. This was the last attempt during the Vietnam War to rescue American POWs held in North Vietnam. Grayback was decommissioned for the second time on 15 January 1984 at Subic Bay Naval Station in the Republic of the Philippines. After decommissioning, Grayback was sunk as a target on 13 April 1986 in the South China Sea.

This video includes several films: The first film, titled "HH-3E Jolly Green Giant Helicopter," provides an overview of the aircraft, focusing on its upgraded instruments and armor, just before the aircraft was sent to Vietnam. The second film, titled "All For One," details the role of Air Force 5-man air rescue teams, whose job it was to bring out downed pilots. Documents the rescue of Capt. Gerald Lawrence in 1972. This film also offers interviews with an A-1 squadron commander (Sandy), as well as the forward air controller. There's excellent live-action footage aboard HH-53s (super jolly greens) of actual rescues, as well as details outlining the specific role of each team member: the pilot, co-pilot, navigator (door gunner) and the para-rescue jumpers, called "PJs." The third film (not narrated) features random scenes of the 20th Special Operations Squadron. Shows camouflaged HH-3Es in flight, landing, loading/offloading troops, dropping paratroopers and transporting troops on cables. The fourth film, titled "Faces Of Rescue," details the rescue of a downed pilot in Vietnam. The fifth film (not narrated) documents a visit by Lt. Gen. Wilson to the 40th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron (ARRS) at Udorn AB in 1969. The sixth film, titled "Air Rescue Southeast Asia," looks at the rescue of a downed pilot with the emphasis on the coordination between the Jolly Greens and the C-130s called "Crows." The last film details rescue training aboard HH-53 Jolly Green helicopter by members of the USAF's para-rescue teams at Osan AB, Republic of Korea.
