(8) During November, B Troop conducted extensive reconnaissance of the border areas in the 3d Bde AO. They plotted the major trail networks and roads running from Cambodia into South Vietnam. Observations indicate that during the first part of the month, there was extremely heavy traffic, both foot and bicycle from the border area North of LOC NINH to the Southwest. During the middle of the month most of the movement appeared to be small units moving back to the North and West. During the latter part of the month heavy Southward movement was again indicated in the area North of LOC NINH.

(9) On 12 Nov 68, B Trp flew its first night visual reconnaissance mission utilizing a starlight scope mounted in a UH-1H. B Trp reported that they could effectively observe roads, rivers and open terrain at night. These missions should be very selective in that they do place a heavy burden on our resources.

(10) On 14 Nov 68 while on screening mission for the 1/12th an OH-6A from B Trp received intense automatic weapons fire; the pilot and observer were killed. The gunner who was only slightly wounded was medevaced by another OH-6A from B Trp.

(11) On 17 Nov 68 while screening for 1/12th an OH-6A observed an enemy ambush position toward which a friendly element was moving. The OH-6A killed 5 NVA and disabled a medium machinegun which was in the center of the ambush position. The remainder of the ambush, an estimated 40 to 50 NVA opened up with intensive automatic weapons fire. The OH-6A sustained 1 hit and had to land immediately. The armed helicopter covering the OH-6A put suppressive fire around the downed aircraft resulting in 6 additional NVA KIA.

(12) On 22 Nov 68 while on a general reconnaissance North of the LOC NINH rubber plantation, a small village was observed that did not appear normal. Closer examination revealed approximately 40 military age males and 25 bicycles in the village. C Trp 1 11th Armd Cav was notified and began moving into the area. The Armored Cav Troop made heavy contact killing well over 60 NVA on 27 Nov 68. B Trp 1/9th Cav provided a continuous screen to the North of the contact area taking fire 5 times, killing 8 NVA and coordinating 3 airstrikes. Enemy casualties during this encounter was well over 150 NVA KIA.

(13) During the month of Nov 68 B Trp Blues were inserted 3 times, detaining 17 individuals who were all later classified as ICS.

(14) B Trp conducted 11 sniffer missions with 261 max readings. They received fire on 1 mission and engaged the area with artillery and airstrikes resulting in 11 KIA.

(2) Operations.

ITEM: Employment of "Tac Air".

DISCUSSION: Throughout the quarter, "Tac Air" has been very successfully employed by the Squadron. This has been particularly true when the troops have been performing aerial reconnaissance in areas distant from friendly forces on the ground. On such missions, clearance to fire can be obtained for large areas and "Tac Air" can be employed on targets of opportunity as they are found. This method of employment contributed greatly to the 238 KEA's accounted for by "Tac Air" employed by the Squadron during the quarter.

OBSERVATIONS: In order to exploit the unique capability of the Air Cavalry Squadron to successfully employ "Tac Air", the Squadron should be allocated three preplanned air strikes per day as long as good targets are available. This would enable each troop to employ one air strike per day. The primary advantages of these preplanned air strikes for the Squadron are as follows:

(a) It enables the troops to plan their visual reconnaissance (VR) in conjunction with the air strike, thereby minimizing the time spent solely for the purpose of employing the "Tac Air". Currently, the great majority of preplanned air strikes are being allocated to the Brigades. Many of these are subsequently being employed by the 1/9th at the Brigade's request. Not having a foreknowledge of the frag times of these strikes, it requires a complete mission be flown for the sole purpose of locating a target for the air strike.

(b) It enables the troops to plan their VR's in remote areas at times which correspond to the preplanned strikes. This in effect, provides an aircap which is always desirable and often necessary on missions of this type.

(c) It insures that prompt and accurate BDA's of the air strikes are performed. This has often resulted in significant findings which would have gone unobserved if air strikes had not opened the canopy, or if the enemy had been given time to clear and camouflage the area after the strike.
