

1998

By connecting an AT&T modem to a message system and another to a DSN line at the MRSOC, Mr. Bill Band, TSgt Morgan Perkins and TSgt Tim Sheppard enabled the Air Force and DoD to save about $2.5 million a year in unnecessary charges. Because of this new communications link, brought on line in January 1998, the 4416 IS was able to fly RC-135 Rivet Joint sorties from Al Kharj AB and receive all communications support from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

On 30 January 1998, Brig. Gen. James Miller explained that as a result of AIA's participation in Blue Flag 98-1, tactics analysis, previously only evident in after action reports, took place during the course of the exercise. Blue Flag 98-1 proved the value of information operations to air operations. In this exercise, the AIA arranged to bring in live TIBS feeds and associated analysts. The participants expressed amazement at the amount of information available from TIBS. The effort to embed AIA information operators in numbered air forces was proved during Blue Flag 98-1.

On 31 January 1998, the first Sensor Guard prototype was shipped from AIA to AMC's Electronic Systems Center (ESC) at Hanscom AFB, MA.

The 68th IS at Brooks AFB, TX, became an Electronic Systems Security Analysis Central, Continental United States in the beginning of 1998. The purpose of the initiative was to streamline operations and help leverage personnel reductions with technological advances.

On 28 February 1998, Brigadier General Regner C. Rider, AIA's vice commander, explained that the Agency's participation in Global Engagement 97 involved an exercise aimed for the future. The AIA's objective was to conduct warfare using anticipated technological advances that might exist in the year 2012. Sponsored by the USAF Chief of Staff, Global Engagement 97 was designed to highlight the contributions of air and space power in the joint military operations of the 21st century. The exercise employed the concept of Information Conditions (INFOCONS).

Personnel from AIA work closely with Air Force Special Operations Command serving as Direct Support Operators aboard several aircraft, including the MH-53J Pave Low III.

On 17 March 1998, after one year of operation, the 820th Security Forces Group (SFG) claimed a busy first year. Its first real-world action came in support of Bright Star and Air Expeditionary Force V at Sheikh Isa AB, Bahrain. Embedded AIA assets in the 820th SFG provided threat assessments and aided in the development of the Force Protection Plan.

The 316th Training Squadron at Goodfellow AFB, TX, graduated 12 students from its first Serbo-Croatian Language Course on 1 April 1998. The 80-day course taught common core knowledge and skills cryptologic linguists require.

Also in April 1998, at the 123rd IS at Little Rock AFB, AR, one of two ANG units in AIA, helped significantly in America's drug war. The unit processed nearly 90 percent of all C-26 aerial photographs in the US for the identification of drug fields.

By the mid-1990s, Communications Security Monitoring gave way to full-fledged multi-mode Electronic Security Systems Assessments (ESSA) operations. A member of AIA's 68 IS, Brooks AFB, TX, conducts ESSA operations--circa 1994.

On 1 April 1998, Det 4, 67th IG, moved to HQ Air Mobility Command (AMC), Scott AFB, IL. The detachment became the newest weapon in the Air Force information operations arsenal. Since activation, effective August 1997, the detachment has used Information Operations (IO) to exploit the vulnerabilities of adversaries while building a protective wall around AMC communications and information systems.

The CARS Deployable Ground Station-2 completed supporting its 400th Creek Torch mission in 1998. Comprised of ACC's 13th IS and AIA's 48th IS, DGS-2 supports the European Commands' intelligence collection requirements, and protects NATO Stabilization Forces in the Balkans.

On 15 July 1998, Major General John Casciano, Director of Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance on the Air Staff, joined Colonel Craig Koziol, the 17th Training Group Commander, in dedicating a MiG-29 Fulcrum Static Display Aircraft at Goodfellow AFB, TX.

The United States purchased the MiG-29 from Moldova. The group also received a MiG-23 Flogger C, an SA-4 surface-to-air missile launcher with two missiles and other assorted equipment.

The USAF Chief of Staff approved the first Air Force information operations doctrine. The doctrine, released on 5 August 1998, defines IO as consisting of two pillars: Information-in-Warfare (IIW) and Information Warfare (IW). IIW encompassed all of the intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance, weather, precision navigation and dissemination activities, and IW includes the offensive and defensive aspects of psychological operations, electronic warfare, deception, destruction, and information defend and attack activities.

On 17 August 1998, Brigadier General John R. Baker assumed command of AIA and JC2WC in ceremonies at Kelly AFB. After relinquishing command of the Agency, Brig. Gen. James E. Miller retired from the Air Force after more than 29 years of service.

On 17 August 1998, command responsibility for JC2WC transitioned to the United States Atlantic Command, Norfolk, Virginia. The JC2WC provides direct command and control warfare support to operational commanders around the world.

Effective 2 October 1998, Mr. Dennis B. Richburg, AIA Technical Director, retired after a civilian and military career that spanned nearly four decades.

During the month of November 1998, AIA commander Brigadier General John R. Baker and his wife Judy, received the General and Mrs. Jerome F. O'Malley award for their work on-base and in the community during General Baker's tenure as commander of PACAF's 18th Wing, Kadena AB, Japan.

At the end of 1998, AIA had a strength of 14,048 personnel; 1,826 officers, 10,083 enlisted and 2,139 civilians.

1999

Mr. Dennis H. Alvey assumed the duties of Executive Director of AIA from the former director, Mr. Dennis B. Richburg.

An Air Force Special Operations Command EC-130E Commando Solo aircraft visited Kelly AFB and highlighted the Agency's Psychological Operations mission.

On 10 March 1999, Lieutenant Colonel Gerry Riley, the AIA's Chief of Plans and Requirements, announced that AIA was going to revitalize its organizational structures to meet the needs the Agency would face in 2010.

After almost 50 years of service, the Technical Operations Division at McClellan AFB, CA, closed its doors and inactivated effective 9 April 1999.

Mr. Robert P. Egger ended half a century of service to the United States when he retired as AIA's Chief of Security on 10 September 1999.

Mr. Dennis H. Alvey became AIA Executive Director in January 1999.

On 17 September 1999, Major General John R. Baker presided over the ceremonies at AIA on the nation-wide POW/MIA Recognition Day meant to honor and highlight the contributions POW/MIAs have made to the country.

Major General John Baker opened the new AIA Heritage Center on 24 September 1999. The Heritage Center, which featured several different displays portraying the history of intelligence and the legacy of AIA, was the only facility of its type in the Air Force dedicated to the memory of air intelligence.

AIA's manning at the end of fiscal year 1999 totaled 13,722. The agency was comprised of 1,811 officers, 9,834 enlisted members and 2,077 civilians.

In December 1999, HQ AIA's Psychological Operations Division completed its second year of operations with an enlarged staff of nine, augmented by Air Force reserve officers and the designation as the Air Force PSYOP Center of Excellence.

2000

On 14 January 2000, ceremonies were held in front of building 2000 dedicating two Vietnam era aircraft, an O-2 Skymaster Psychological Operations Aircraft and an AQM-34L Remotely Piloted Vehicle Reconnaissance Drone. Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force (CMSAF) Frederick J. Finch joined AIA commander Major General Baker in the dedication ceremonies.

On 31 January 2000, Brigadier General Bruce A. Wright, formerly the deputy director for information operations on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, assumed command of AIA from Major General John R. Baker.

In February 2000, an aircrew from the 488th IS, RAF Mildenhall, England, flew a new RC-135 RJ on its first operational mission. The combat support sortie in the Balkans region marked the first time in nearly 30 years that a new RJ aircraft joined the existing fleet. Raytheon Systems delivered the 15th aircraft to ACC on 15 October 1999.

The second new RC-135 RJ aircraft joined the RJ inventory at Offutt AFB, NE, on 30 March 2000.

On 21 April 2000, in ceremonies at HQ AIA, Brig. Gen. Bruce Wright pinned on his second star.

The 566th Operations Support Squadron became the 566th Information Operations Squadron (IOS) on 1 August 2000 to reflect a fundamental change in its mission. The unit, located at Buckley ANG Base, CO, is a part of the multi-agency organization responsible for support to national-level communications, data processing and high-speed relay.

On 2 August 2000, the 692nd Intelligence Support Squadron inactivated in order to become part of the 692nd Intelligence Group (IG), now the 692 IOG.

The 12th Expeditionary Intelligence Squadron completed its 10th year of real-time intelligence support to Joint Task Force Southwest Asia supporting patrols of the southern no-fly zone over Iraq on 4 August 2000.

The NAIC, on 16 August 2000, held a dedication ceremony for its MiG-29UB Fulcrum B aircraft. The aircraft on display was one of 21 fighter aircraft the United States purchased from the Republic of Moldova in October 1999.

On 1 November 2000, the 92nd Information Warfare Aggressor Sq. (IWAS) was activated under the 318 IOG, one of the AFIWC's subordinate units.

Ceremonies were held on 20 November 2000 to commemorate the 303rd IS' 50th anniversary. After the September 1950 UN landing at Inchon and the subsequent drive into North Korea, its predecessor, the 1st RSM, started operations in Pyongyang, North Korea in 1950. A plaque was dedicated in the Korean Combined Operations Intelligence Center to commemorate the accomplishments of the 3303rd and its predecessor organizations over its 50-year history.

2001

On 1 February 2001, the Air Force announced force structure changes that aligned AIA under the ACC. The realignment placed AIA's two wings, the 67th Information Operations Wing (IOW) at Kelly AFB, TX, and the 70th IW at Ft. Meade, MD, under ACC's 8th Air Force headquartered at Barksdale AFB, LA.

AIA's commander picked up additional responsibilities on 1 February 2001 as the 8th Air Force Deputy Commander for Information Operations.

On 1 February 2001, General John Jumper, Commander of ACC, in ceremonies highlighting AIA becoming part of ACC explained, "decision quality data needs to flow fast and free to all levels—between air operations centers, the shooters, the controllers and the intelligence community."

The 390 IS, Kadena AB, Japan and the 488 IS, RAF Mildenhall, England, officially became part of ACC's 8th Air Force on 1 February 2001.

In 2002, Black Demon, a multi-command exercise designed to enhance the Air Force's computer network defense capability, ended after two weeks of extensive exercise play. The exercise validated the effectiveness of network defense tactics against worldwide attack.

Brigadier General Paul J. Lebras (later promoted to Major General) assumed command of AIA on 20 February 2002. He previously served as the AIA Vice Commander from 1998-1999.

During the ground-breaking ceremony for the new guard gate on Security Hill on 15 April 2002, U. S. Representative Ciro Rodriguez, (D-Texas, San Antonio) commented of AIA; "you are essential to our nation's offensive and defensive air operations throughout the world and I'm grateful for the contributions you make to our national defense."

Staff Sergeant Shane Kimmett, a Direct Support Operator assigned to AIA's 25th IOS at Hurlburt Field, FL, died on 7 August 2002 along with nine other aircrew in the crash of an MC-130H Combat Talon. The aircraft crashed 20 miles south of San Juan while on a training flight from NAS Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, to the west coast of Puerto Rico.

On 9 February 2001, AIA completed its most robust participation to date in Exercise Blue Flag 01-02, which began on 30 January 2001. Blue Flag is ACC's foremost large-scale, force-on-force, computer-assisted airpower exercise. The AIA's involvement included full participation from 67 IOW personnel.

On 11 June 2001, members of the 68 IOS at Brooks AFB, TX, earned recognition from higher headquarters as the most significant organizational contributor to the Air Force's operational security posture.

Brigadier General Carol C. Elliot retired from the Air Force on 29 June 2001 after 28 years of service. She served as the AIA's first female Vice Commander from 26 October 1999 until her retirement.

On 11 October 2001, Detachment 1, 18th IS deployed to Southwest Asia. The squadron managed to achieve operational status within 16 hours after arrival.

2003

Major General Paul J. Lebras assumed command of AIA 20 February 2002.

Mr. Jer Donald Get, AIA's current Executive Director

This name change better represents and accurately describes the responsibilities and mission of the Center, which includes foreign space analysis.

The 690th Support Squadron, long associated with USAFSS and AIA, inactivated on 25 February at Lackland AFB.

The Air Force dropped its first PDU-5/B leaflet bomb in March 2003. In this instance the Iraqi people received word the Americans were coming to liberate them from Saddam Hussein's regime.

Mr. Jer Donald Get was selected as AIA's Executive Director in April 2003, replacing Mr. Dennis H. Alvey who had served at AIA from 1998 until his retirement in January 2003.

On 25 July Colonel George L. Thompson assumed command of the AFIWC from Colonel Arthur Wachdorf who retired after 26 years of active duty.

Colonel Ian Dickinson assumed command of the 690th IOG on 29 July from departing Colonel Rebecca Gentry.

On 11 August Major General Paul Lebras joined with Dr. Richard Romo, the President of the University of Texas at San Antonio, to dedicate the Center for Infrastructure Assurance and Security (CIAS). The CIAS is a coordinated effort aimed at conducting research and development efforts on critical and complex information assurance and security-focused matters. End products will offer technology transfers among government, academia, and industry.

Colonel Bruce Bingle assumed command of the 67th IOW on 28 September 2003 from Colonel Roger Gaebel who retired after 25 years on active duty.

On 11 December the 480th IW activated at Langley AFB, VA with Colonel Larry Grundhauser as the first commander.

During the annual Tactics Review Board meeting - held January 2003 at Nellis AFB, NV, the participants decided to incorporate IO as a full partner in shaping future Air Force tactics.

On 23 February 2003, NAIC was redesignated the National Air and Space Intelligence Center (NASIC).

The 690th Support Squadron, long associated with USAFSS and AIA, inactivated on 25 February at Lackland AFB.

The Air Force dropped its first PDU-5/B leaflet bomb in March 2003. In this instance the Iraqi people received word the Americans were coming to liberate them from Saddam Hussein's regime.
