5/12 Find 375 Tons Of Rice

By SP4 Peter Nagurny
FSB MYRON -- Over 375 tons of rice and more than 187,000 AK-47 rifle rounds were among the food and equipment seized by elements of the 5th Bn, 12th Inf in two separate cache areas in the "Fishhook" region approximately 105 miles north of Saigon.

"Enough supplies to arm and feed an NVA Regiment for two years," exclaimed one high ranking officer as he described the contents of the two caches discovered by the "Warriors."

One of the Largest

An element of Alpha Co made the initial find by uncovering a small weapons cache on May 17th. The 3rd platoon reported finding 24 new SKS rifles hidden in a jungle supply area. A number of opened weapon boxes were also discovered in the same cache.

The following day the 1st platoon of Alpha Co seized one of the largest food caches found since the beginning of the Cambodian Campaign. Over 250,000 pounds of rice was

'Warriors' Heist 'Charlie's' Arms

By SP4 David Hauser

FSB NANCY -- Keen sight and quick action on the part of "Eagle Warriors" 4th Bn, 12th Inf resulted in the capture and removal of an estimated two ton arms cache 26 miles northeast of Xuan Loc May 23rd-25th.

A total of 155 weapons were uncovered. The cache, containing 129 individual and 26 crew served weapons, was discovered in two separate locations just a few meters apart and less than two clicks northeast of the point where "Apache Warriors" found eight tons of rice recently.

After climbing nearly 200 meters in steep mountainous terrain the day before, the "Eagle Warriors" had nearly completed a sweep of trails May 23rd along a ridge line when they discovered the first cache.

"I thought we had come upon the enemy," asserted Sergeant Terrance Woodrow, squad leader from Minnetonka, Minn. Private First Class Bill Tipton pointman from Maneca, Calif., came back to tell him of the poncho covered hootch over the stream bed to their front.

Woodrow added, "After hearing signal shots all day as we moved along we were looking for a fire fight." But much to the surprise of the "Warriors", a check of the area assisted by their scout dog team revealed no evidence of the enemy's immediate presence.

As they carefully set up security around the area Private First Class William Knight from San Diego, Calif. moved up closer to the hootch to see what was inside and reported back to the squad that there weapons not enemy inside.

"We just couldn't believe what we saw," exclaimed Private First Class John Lowe a machine gunner from Bellflower, Calif. "We were amazed that they humped all this stuff up there!"

After checking the cache for possible booby traps, a closer look inside the hootch revealed 22 AK-47 rifles, 12 60mm mortars with 10 sights, six Chicom light machine guns, and an assortment of ammo magazines along with web gear.

Next day, May 24th another squad moved out on a sweep of the high ground to the west while one squad stayed behind to secure the cache.

"We had moved about 100 meters into a bamboo thicket when we saw another identically built hootch on the side of a hill," recalled Sergeant George Honea squad leader from Magnolia, Miss.

'Cottonbalers' Repulse NVA Attack; Inflict Heavy Enemy Losses

By SP4 Dave Schaffer and SP4 Todd Weber

FSB SUN -- "Cottonbalers" of the 3rd Bn, 7th Inf supported by Bravo Btry of the 2nd Bn, 35th Arty, elements of the 5th Bn, 35th Arty, and an element of the 720th Regional Forces repulsed a large scale attack on there position here May 28th, killing 43 enemy soldiers.

A mortar attack started what was to be a sporadic six hour battle.

Shortly before midnight, 60mm and 82mm mortar fire from the northwest impacted at the base. The small base received less than 25 rounds.

"Twelve rounds hit near our area," said Sergeant Charles Watkins, NCOIC of Echo Co's radar from Marion, Ind. "We had detected movement on radar and had Charlie Co's mortars fire at the radar sightings."

Counter Fired Incoming Rounds

Reacting instantly, Charlie Co counter fired the incoming mortar rounds. "First we fired at the area of the radar sighting," explained Specialist Four Charles Weaver from Orange Beach, Ala., squad leader with Charlie mortars, "then we brought the tubes up and fired into the tree line around the perimeter."

In less than two hours the Charlie Co mortar men fired 640 rounds and then rushed to positions on the berm to continue the fight.

Immediately following the mortar attack, an estimated three companies of NVA attacked the perimeter. The enemy attacked with RPGs, B-40 rockets, 51 caliber machine guns, a 75mm recoilless rifle, and small arms fire.

Responded Immediately

The "Cottonbalers" returned the heavy enemy fire with combined 155mm howitzer at point blank range, two Dusters, two quad 50 caliber machine guns, automatic weapons, and small arms.

"Men on the perimeter responded immediately to the sudden attack," said Sergeant Tom Bogart a squad leader with Echo's 4.2 mortar from Racine, Wis. "This gave the mortars and 155s the critical amount of time to effectively engage the source of enemy fire."

Lull In The Fighting

Typical of the instant reactions of everyone at "Sun" during the attack was the case of Specialist Four Wesley Rasmussen, a cook with headquarters Co from Schiller, Ill. "When the mortars started coming in I grabbed my weapon and ran to the berm and started firing."

About 2 a.m. a lull in the fighting allowed emergency resupply and dustoff helicopters to come in. The choppers were fired upon as sporadic fighting continued until about 5:30 a.m. when mortars fell again. Less than eight mortar impacted near the area. The enemy did not follow with a ground attack.

Enemy Withdrew

The enemy withdrew leaving 36 of their dead behind. Two wounded detainees were taken and nine individual weapons were captured. Regional Forces casualties were light and US casualties were 19 wounded.

Subsequent sweeps of the area around "Sun" over the following few days uncovered seven more bodies raising the total killed to 43. Also found were nine AK-47s, six 60mm mortar rounds, four 82mm mortar rounds, 12 B-40 rounds, five B-40 launchers, four 25 pound Chicom claymores, 400 rounds of 7.62 machine gun rounds, and 23 AK-47 magazines.

Impact Awards Presented

Impact awards were presented the next day by Colonel Robert W. Selton, commander of the 199th. Awards presented included 10 Bronze Stars for Valor and three Army Commendation Medals for Valor to members of Charlie Co, and eight Bronze Stars for Valor and five Army Commendation Medals for Valor to members of Echo Co.

'Cottonbalers' Kill Five

By SP4 David Schaffer

HAM TAN -- Elements of Charlie Co, 3rd Bn, 7th Inf entered a bunker complex 45 miles east of Xuan Loc May 18th to investigate when they engaged an enemy unit of an unknown size, killing five and recovering 2 AK-47s, one 82mm mortar, and two sewing machines.

"Our platoon was set up on a day ambush on a trail leading into a bunker complex," explained Specialist Four Ed Suffel, a machine gunner with the third platoon from Flint, Michigan. "About nine o'clock the first platoon went into the bunker complex and made contact."

The enemy initiated small arms fire against the first.

Drug Abuse

Drug abuse has a particularly important consequence for the Armed Forces. Unlike civilians, those in the military service have a special dependency on each other. Each member of a patrol is dependent on his comrades for survival in a combat situation. No one can trust the fate of his unit to a man who may be under the influence of drugs.

The drug abuser in military service leaves himself open as a security risk—for example, he can be blackmailed by threat of exposure. He also can be led to sell or give away classified information to support his drug habit. Also, while under the influence of narcotics he may overlook or ignore proper security measures.

In the past several years there has been an increase in the misuse or abuse of beneficial drugs as well as dangerous drugs. The dangerous drugs, of primary interest here, can lead to psychological dependence, acute and even long lasting mental illness, panic, paranoia, recurrence, accidental death, and several scientists have reported that chromosomal damage or change can result.

A 1967 study of narcotic addicts from city areas showed that more than 80 percent had previously used marijuana. Of the much larger number of persons who use marijuana, scientists agree that few go on to use morphine and heroin. No direct cause-and-effect link between the use of marijuana and narcotics has been found. Researchers point out, however, a person predisposed to abuse one drug may be likely to abuse other, stronger drugs.

Marijuana is the drug most widely abused by Americans in Vietnam. Its use is particularly hazardous. While under its influence, concepts of time and space can be radically distorted, and response to an emergency becomes unpredictable.

The issues surrounding the use of dangerous drugs are many. Not the least of these is the law. The law breaking use of illicit drugs can jeopardize not only health but the pursuit of careers.

An arrest of conviction for marijuana possession or use of—is a felony. Conviction for a felony can prevent a person from being able to enter a profession such as medicine, law, or teaching. Be aware of the social and legal facts about getting involved with drugs.

The Army sponsors a continuing Amnesty Program under which an individual may turn in his supply of the drugs he uses and go to his chaplain or surgeon for help. So long as he is not already being investigated or prosecuted for drug abuse, no one will say a word against him, and he will get the help he needs without fear of punishment.

The dangers of drug abuse is increased in Vietnam because the soldier finds himself in a combat zone where the lives of his friends may depend on him. The degree to which you meet and fulfill your duties in Vietnam will be a measure of your own maturity and your pride in yourself as a man.

LTC Crancer Commands 'Warriors'

By PFC Mark Robinson

FSB MYRON -- The 199th's 5th Bn, 12th Inf became the first unit to conduct a battalion change of command ceremony since allied military forces entered Cambodia.

Colonel Robert W. Selton, commander of the 199th, passed the "Warrior" battalion colors from the outgoing commander Colonel David A. Becker to Lieutenant Colonel John W. Crancer at a ceremony held here May 26.

Col Becker who has led the 5/12 "Warriors" since November 17, will assume the duties as the G-5 of II Field Force. He was promoted to his present rank May 13 while serving as the unit's commanding officer in Cambodia.

Present for the occasion was Major General George W. Casey, Commanding General of the 1st Cav Div. GEN Casey awarded Becker the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action for his part in the aerial resupply mission flown May 13 while the unit was opposed to the 1st Cav Div.

COL Selton presented the former commander the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star with "V" device, and Air Medal with nine oak leaf clusters.

LTC Crancer was the operations officer for the Brigade before assuming his new post with the "Warriors". The battalion will be his second command within the Brigade. Crancer was commander of the 3rd Bn, 7th Inf.

The Chaplain Speaks

The Man Who Forgot God

By Chaplain (CPT) Kendrick A. Gould

I recently talked to a group of men who had been under fire for several hours the night before. Several of them commented that they had done a lot of praying during their ordeal. This is a natural thing to do. We all do it at one time or another. We are simply acknowledging the fact that we have a relationship with God.

How about when things are going along smoothly? Do we recognize our relationship to God then?

In the New Testament, in the Gospel of Luke, Jesus tells about a man who forgot his relationship with God. The man was a farmer. He was very successful in his occupation. His land yielded such an abundance of crops that his old facilities were not adequate to contain the fruits of his harvest.

The man gave all credit for his success to himself. His conversation centers around himself and his accomplishments. He settles back for a life of ease until God reminds him of how foolish he has been.

The man forgot about God. He could not see beyond himself and his own little empire. He did not think about his responsibility to God and his fellow man.

What about yourself? Do you ever find yourself becoming so involved in your own little world that God is crowded out of your life?

The man forgot that every ability we have is a gift from God. Many people in the world do not have eyes to see with, feet to stand on, or clear thinking brains to make plans with. Our success in life comes only as a result of being able to use God-given abilities.

The man also forgot that God is more interested in the individual himself than He is in that individual's accomplishments. If you are only a private, God is just as interested in you as He is in the man who has attained the rank of general. God wants to be a part of your life. He wants to help you achieve true success in life.

The man in Jesus's parable forgot that there is a day of accounting in the future. The day will come when each of us will personally stand before God. We will account for the way in which we have used this life that God has given us.

We are all vitally involved in living. Each one has many plans and ideas for the future. Every individual must be careful that they do not fall into the same trap as the man in the parable. Are you so involved in living that you have forgotten God?

ARVN Build Comm Tower

By SP4 Jon Sweet

XUAN LOC -- To the 18th ARVN Division's Signal Battalion, companion unit of the 199th, "Dong Tien" or "Progress Together" means combining with American signalmen to construct a 130 foot-high communications tower, the first of its kind in the III Corps CTZ.

The new aluminum tower, called the AB261, was constructed in two days here recently by ARVN signalmen and advisors from the 1st Signal Brigade's 327th Signal Co in Long Binh.

"We can now put our UHF, FM, high frequency, and all of our other receivers on this one antenna," said Major Nguyen Van Trieu, the signal officer for the 33rd DTA and the 18th Division. "It also gives us greater capability and is more reliable and more accurate."

"We can contact any of our units without the aid of a relay station," Maj. Trieu continued. "We can pick up anything within a 45-mile radius loud and clear."

Once before the Division's signalmen had tried to construct such a tower, but failed to complete it.

"All they had was a manual, but that didn't show them all the fine points," said an American advisor. "There's no substitute for the OJT type of training."

MAJ. Trieu said his men were capable of handling minor tower repairs, but have to rely on the 327th's mobile team for complex repairs.

2/3 Medic Wins Three Bronze Stars

By SP4 Jerome Wadian

FSB MACE -- In ceremonies here May 23rd, Specialist Albie J. Wyce Jr. from Waterford, N.J. received his third Bronze Star for Valor.

Wyce, a medic with a recon element of 2nd Bn, 3rd Inf, has exemplified the extraordinary performance and devotion to duty as a medic.

First Bronze Star

He earned his first Bronze Star last August 23rd after spending less than a month in the field. On that day Wyce crawled through heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire to reach a wounded comrade. He not only gave first aid, but further risked his life to drag the man out of danger.

On November 11 Wyce was with his unit when they came upon an enemy occupied base camp of regimental size. During the heavy contact which ensued, the unit's RTO was hit. Courageously, Specialist Wyce maneuvered 40 meters through enemy fire to reach the wounded man.

Evacuates Comrade To Safety

Completely disregarding his own safety, he managed to give first aid and evacuate the man to a safe position. His actions not only saved the man's life, but were instrumental in inspiring his unit as they refused to withdraw.

Wyce, for his courageous and inspiring actions, received his second Bronze Star.

Sprinted Under Intense Fire

Less than a month later, on December 8th, the twenty year old medic was again putting his skill and courage to the test. His unit was on a sweep operation when it collided with 20 NVA soldiers. The pointman was hit and Wyce sprung into action. He sprinted 25 meters over open ground under intense fire to reach the man. His quick action and alertness was credited to saving the man's life.

It is for this action that Specialist Wyce was presented his third Bronze Star for Valor Award.

2/40 Plays Strategic Role

By SP4 Andy McCullough

FSB BROWN -- After spending an unprecedented six months in a single location, elements of Delta Battery of the 2nd Bn, 40th Arty left behind such luxuries as shower stalls, square hootches with comfortable interiors, and a newly opened bar-clubroom to begin their May 3 drive toward Cambodia to provide fire support for elements of the 5th Bn, 12th Inf.

Over a period of eight days, the battery moved in and out of three bases--FSBs Lee, Buttons and Snoopy.

Answers 'Charlie'

At FSB Buttons during the early part of one evening, a quick barrage of rockets exploded inside the perimeter. Rising to the occasion, Gun Section Two set an unofficial record of rapid fire for the battalion by firing 72 rounds within a 12 minute period in retaliation to the enemy threat.

In that short period of time a total of 356 rounds were fired by the battery on target. The bunker complex from which the rockets were fired was later discovered to be obliterated, with several bunkers razed to ground level from direct hits.

Since May 11th when D Btry crossed the Cambodian border and moved into FSB Brown, 70 percent of all missions are fired in support of 5th Bn, 12th Inf when in direct contact with the enemy. The unit has averaged firing over a 1000 rounds a day.

'Charlie' Comes Over

Three days after moving into FSB Brown, on the morning of May 14th, a rallier turned himself into members of 5th Bn, 12th Inf. During the ensuing interrogation he revealed becoming scared after his friend had been killed by artillery fire so he decided to rally.

The area in which the NVA were located, a half click away from FSB Brown, was saturated with artillery fire during a contact mission several hours earlier. In his possession, the rallier had an AK-47, one M-16, one .45 caliber, and two fragmentation grenades.

Since entering Cambodia, the combined efforts of the Brigade units operating out of FSB Brown have resulted in the capture of approximately 220 tons of rice and several arms and munition caches.

Building Childhood Memories

By SP4 David Hauser

SAIGON -- Children. In a combat zone reflections of childhood are certainly among the least thought of, but do you remember as a child your first trip to the zoo?

"Until recently many children had never been out of their hamlets and many more had never seen a city," said Lieutenant Anthony J. Travaline from Philadelphia, Pa., Brigade assistant civic action officer.

A Chance To See Places

A program has been set up on a continuous basis with MACV Civic Action explained Lt. Travaline, enabling school children to visit the capital city and the Saigon zoo.

As a result of this program children living in hamlets and villages throughout the Brigade's area of operation are now getting a chance to see places and things that most had only heard talked about previously.

On one such Saturday recently the 4th Bn, 12th Inf Civic Action Team organized their first trip to Saigon for the children at Dinh Quan School.

Anxious And Excited

"The children were really anxious and excited about the trip as they boarded our trucks that morning," recalled Specialist Four Curtis Courington, a driver for the trip.

Following the 60 mile journey by truck to Camp Frenzell-Jones the group transferred to a transportation motor pool bus which took them into Saigon and to the Brink Hotel where they met their hosts for the day.

An interpreter, Miss Hoa, and two members of the MACV Civic Action Team welcomed the children to Saigon. In a matter of minutes the group was off on a drive by the presidential palace and other Saigon landmarks before finally arriving at the zoo.

Tour Of Zoo Begins

As the bus pulled in through the gates 50 youngsters slightly dusty but not the least bit dampened in spirits by the long trip, could hardly wait to eat the lunch their sponsor had provided before starting out on a tour of the zoo.

Miss Hoa led the way as the tour of the animal cages began. Situated among the huge shade trees and myriad of walkways that joined the park-like area were the animals awaiting their young visitors.

Feed The Animals

First there were the elephants, then the kangaroos, bears, birds and all the other animals.

Some of the children bought sugar cane to feed the elephants, while others tossed peanuts to the hungry monkeys and others bought candy and gum for themselves from the sidewalk vendors.

The children from Dinh Quan did what most children do—they had a full day of fun at the zoo adding to their collection of childhood memories.

Village Self Development Program Aids Econ Growth

By SP4 William Ludescher

BINH LOC -- Numerous civic action projects financed both locally and with US help have begun to spark community involvement and raise the standard of living in this village near the 5th Bn, 12th Inf's fire support base "Libby."

Improvement here has been so marked, in fact, that the civil affairs agency of MACV has selected Binh Loc to be the model village in Long Khanh Province.

"Basically, this only means that the village will have to put up with more visits from assorted dignitaries wanting to inspect village projects," chuckled Mr. Steven Kinsley, a Civilian Organization for Rural Development (CORDS) official recently, "but it will probably also make it easier for them to get more funds for their projects here."

Rice Mill Purchased

Much of the work

accomplished in Binh Loc uses funds provided by the Village Self Development (VSD) program in addition to local contributions.

A typical project financed this way involves a rice mill purchased last fall that today promises to be a continuing source of revenue for the village for many years to come.

The 45 families involved in the project have organized themselves into a kind of mini-corporation. They charge 120 piasters for each 100 kilograms of grain polished, out of which 35 piasters goes to the cost of operating the mill. The remaining 85 piasters is profit.

Tractor from Profits

The families involved have already saved 80,000 piasters since the mill opened last October, and village chief Dao Van Dinh, who has been instrumental getting such village activity off the ground, estimates that this group will be able to purchase a farm tractor from their profits within six months.

The Village Self Development program was initiated in 1969 in an attempt to channel rural development funds directly to all the villages in South Vietnam. During 1969, the American government earmarked 1,000,000 piasters for every village in the country, regardless of its size, for this purpose.

Political Goal

One goal of the program is, of course, economic--simply to help improve the living standard throughout South Vietnam.

The main thrust of the program, however, is political. The villagers must organize themselves, hold meetings to decide what kind of projects they most urgently need, research how much everything will cost, and then actually plan out the execution of their ideas.

"We're trying to give them incentives to work together and assume some of the initiative to improve themselves," commented Mr. Kinsley. "We can almost measure the success of the VSD program by the number of meetings the village has to hold and the number of fights the people get into trying to decide how they want to spend their money."

135 Projects Finished

Projects costing less than 50,000 piasters can be planned and executed by the villages themselves, without the approval from the provincial government. However, more expensive endeavors require this authorization.

During 1969, 133 projects costing between 50,000 and 150,000 piasters and 11 costing more than 150,000 piasters were started throughout Long Khanh Province. Of these, 135 have already been completed.

The remaining are awaiting materials for their completion.

Often Frustrating

The vast majority of these programs are animal raising efforts involving pigs, cattle, and chickens. Although they are intended to involve a group of families working together to raise the animals and in turn sharing the profits, what often happens is that the families involved will just divide up the assets and go home.

"Sometimes it's really quite frustrating," explained Kinsley, "most of these people still don't understand even simple corporate endeavors. It takes a strong, energetic village chief to preserve the communal nature of a project and prevent the VSD program from turning into just a glorified give-away."

Binh Loc Good Example

The village of Binh Loc is an example of just how effective the VSD program can be, given the proper leadership from the village government.

The Montagnard hamlet Tin Nghia in Binh Loc, for example, recently started a poultry raising project. Using 40,000 piasters from the VSD program and 30,000 from their own pockets, the 16 families involved bought 200 baby chicks in October of last year and raised them to maturity.

Charging 250 piasters per kilogram, they managed to sell 100 of their chickens before the Tet holidays, earning about 50,000 piasters.

Invest Profits

They then purchased another 150 chicks from the proceeds in order to continue the business, and split the balance among themselves as profit.

"Although this might seem a fairly small achievement," reflected Mr. Kinsley, "you must understand that normally these people would probably have just divided up the chickens among themselves on the first day and had them eaten within a week."

In theory, the VSD program requires a village to pay for half the expenses of a given project. In practice, however, this is seldom possible--especially for the more expensive undertakings--simply because the people have no way of getting that much money.

Six Projects

During 1969, the village of Binh Loc initiated six projects costing a total of 1,420,000 piasters, of which the villagers themselves contributed 420,000. The balance comes from VSD funds.

These projects included the purchase of the rice mill, the poultry raising project, a cattle raising effort, and the purchase of two hand tractors and a four wheeled tractor (which has not as yet been delivered due to assorted bureaucratic delays). The rice mill and the tractors promise to be a continuing source of revenue for further communal endeavors by the villagers.

Although the people of Binh Loc are a far cry from being full scale capitalists, they are at least beginning to learn how to re-invest a part of their profits in further self improvement projects.

ARVN Crush 'Charlie'

By SP4 Jon Sweet

PARROT'S BEAK -- Units of the Vietnamese 318 Task Force made four significant contacts with enemy elements during the first 18 days inside Cambodia including an eight-hour long contact in which 120 Viet Cong were killed near Kampong Travek.

The clash near Kampong Travek occurred when two ARVN battalions on a sweep pressed an enemy force into a blocking element of units from the 18th ARVN Division, companion unit of the 199th, and the 5th ARVN Division's 15th Cavalry Regiment.

The three-pronged attack was supported by four ARVN air strikes and Medevac ships and US Cobra gunships. It also netted three detainees, 12 AK-47 rifles, two 75mm recoilless rifles, and miscellaneous medical supplies.

In other action, an element of the 18th ARVN Division, charged with defending a fire support base of the US and ARVN artillery batteries north of Svay Reing, withstood a three-hour enemy ground probe coupled with 250 incoming mortar rounds.

"Rounds were coming in from the east and west sides of the perimeter," recalled First Leutenant George Drumming, Jr., an ARVN advisor from Philadelphia, Pa. "It was dark out and we had no idea what size enemy force we were dealing with."

One ARVN was killed and three wounded during the encounter. Three US artillery men were wounded. Six enemy bodies were found the following morning.

During the first days of the Cambodian operations, elements of the task force made contact with an estimated 50 enemy defending an empty aid station in Kampong Rou village just inside the Cambodian border.

"We entered the village from the west end," explained Major William R. Nolen, an ARVN advisor from Florence, S.C. "Everybody was waving and smiling at us, and then when we arrived in the eastern section of the village, everything opened up."

During the five hour contact, infantrymen from the 18th Division and units from the 25th Division's 18th Cavalry Regiment killed 17 enemy and took 29 detainees, including two doctors, two medics, and 10 female nurses.

Four days later during an 11 hour battle, units of the 18th Cav and 18th ARVN Division killed 32 enemy discovered by the element in a heavily camouflaged storage area near the first find.

"We were moving down a small hill towards a suspected cache area when my pointman spotted a hootch under some thick bamboo. We dropped our equipment and moved into check the area for enemy activity," said First Lieutenant William Ness of Freemont, N.J., platoon leader.

Rice And Truck Parts

While moving in Private First Class Timothy Dolan from St. Louis, Mo., the pointman recalled, "after spotting the first hootch, the machine gunner covered me as I moved in to get a better look at the camp. I found three more hootches inside the complex."

A search of the four hootches in the complex produced approximately 120 tons of rice. A number of holes containing parts for trucks, including universal joints, drive shafts, and fuel were also discovered by the element.

More Rice

Subsequent sweeps of the area produced six additional hootches containing more than 500,000 pounds of rice. The recon platoon of Echo Co was credited with the second large cache during the "Warriors" Cambodian operation.

"We had been out for seven days and were ground reconning through the jungle toward Brown. We hadn't seen any trails or signs of enemy activity since our first day out. As the pointman was cutting his way through the thick bamboo he sighted a small hootch in a heavily vegetated area. We set up security and checked the immediate vicinity for booby-traps before entering the hootch.

"A search of the structure produced a large underground storage area containing a weapons and ammo cache," explained First Lieutenant Wayne Otte from Bozeman, Mont., recon platoon leader.

66,000 AK-47 Rounds

The structure revealed 324 rounds of B-41s with boosters, 38 120mm mortar rounds with charges and fuses, 10 new SKS rifles, and 66,000 AK-47 rifle rounds.

The platoon spent the following two day extracting the cache from the area.

As the element prepared to continue their march back to "Brown" they found their second cache of the patrol.

All of the enemy supplies were evacuated from the cache sights by the "Warriors."

Wright from Columbus, Ohio, could hardly believe what he heard over his radio when Honea's squad reported what they had found.

Wright explained, "I had just said, 'I wish we could find about a 100 rifles' when SGT Honea's squad called in and said they had found another cache with 85 SKS rifles. Everyone was happy about that."

In addition to the SKS find, the "Eagle Warriors" discovered 17 French bolt action Mausers, two 7.62 modified anti-aircraft heavy machine guns, six sub-machine guns, two telescopic sights and 75 cases of web gear.

'Redcatchers' Pause to Pay Tribute

Our nation has for many years paid tribute and reverence to the honored men who have given their lives for our country.

In commemoration of these men and their courage, fortitude and their personal sacrifice, the 199th Light Infantry Brigade staged a Memorial Day service at Brigade Main Base Headquarters. Under the direction of Colonel Robert W. Selton, commanding officer and main speaker, the ceremony was executed with the tradition and importance it so deserved.

After a pause for mutual prayer Col Selton delivered his Memorial Day message:

Today, 30 May, has traditionally been set aside by the American people to cherish and rever the memory of those who have given the last full measure of devotion to their country.

It is significant on this occasion to realize that although the 199th Brigade was specifically organized for the Vietnamese war, the combat arms regiments of the brigade have been serving their nation with distinction for over a century and a half. One of the infantry regiments represented in this brigade first fought at the Battle of the Fallen Timbers in 1794; all of the infantry regiments represented here today have fought in every war that our nation has fought since the war of 1812. Many of your forefathers in these same regiments have given their lives since the Battle of New Orleans, way before your time, through the most critical battles of World War II and Korea, which many of you remember. In this war in Vietnam, the cost to the Redcatcher Brigade, in fighting for the ideals of freedom, has been grievous. Many of your friends and your brothers have paid the ultimate price of laying down their lives for their country.

At this time when there is much dissent in our country it is fitting to pay our respect to those who did serve their country when called, and to pay particular homage to that group, who having elected to serve their country, paid the ultimate sacrifice of their lives. I am not deluded by those at home who say that they oppose war on moral grounds, because I know, as you know, that some of the bravest men that we have in this brigade are medics who are conscientious objectors and do not bear arms. They serve their country and serve it well. Most of the great American public knows that you can't get something for nothing. Unfortunately there are those who think they can reap the benefits of our great nation without paying the price of service.

All that our country is and all that it ever will be is based on the sacrifices of your forefathers and yourselves in the service of your nation. The most enduring debt that our nation owes is to those who have served it by laying down their lives on the field of battle. I ask that you pause now to rever their memory.

platoon. The "Cottonbales" struck back pouring fire into enemy positions killing one of the enemy. Two sewing machines were later discovered in the bunkers.

"After the first platoon's contact the enemy ran down the trail that we were set up along," said Specialist Four Miguel Martinez, a third platoon's machine gunner from Santa Barbara, Calif.

"Not more than a half hour after the contact we saw a point man coming toward us," added Martinez. The third platoon waited until the enemy point man was well into their ambush before the trap was sprung, blowing the claymore.

Immediately after detonating the claymore the platoon opened up with a barrage of fire. When the fire fight was over four enemy lay dead. An 82mm mortar tube and bipod were found with the enemy and a large quantity of clothes in their rucksacks.

There were no US casualties.
