Operations

(1) HHT: The basic mission of the Command Aviation Section of Headquarters Troop was to supply support aircraft and conduct administrative liaison between the troops.

During the month of March aviation support was supplied principally to the Rangers as C&C and lift ships, resulting in numerous insertions of Rangers in the area between the DMZ and the Huong Ruong Valley. Contact was made in numerous areas during this period with damage to only one headquarters aircraft. Command Aviation support was also called on by Bravo and Charlie troops during this period. Division G-2 (ground surveillance) requested air support and ground monitoring for sensor drops, which produced excellent results.

The month of April marked a major increase in enemy activity in the A Shau Valley and Khe Sanh area. This demanded a coordinated effort of all elements of the 2/17 Cavalry to maintain constant surveillance of enemy movements. This effort resulted in heavy combat damage to all troop's aircraft who in turn called upon headquarters for support. Support was furnished to troops day and night as required. One aircraft was destroyed due to combat damage and one excessively damaged as a result of enemy ground fire. All injuries were of a minor nature. These missions resulted in Headquarters Command Aviation Section flying well over 450 hrs with 7 aircraft in a 30 day period. Other sections of Headquarters Troop supported the Squadron with logistical and maintenance support. During the months of March and April Headquarters Troop provided a greater number of guards in Bravo sector of the Eagle defense perimeter in relief of Troop A, 2d Squadron, (Abn), 17th Cavalry period ending 30 April 1970 RCS 65 (R2)

(2) Troop A: During the reported period Troop A participated in two major operations; Randolph Glen beginning 8 December 69 and ending 31 March 70, and Texas Star beginning 1 April 70 and still in progress. Throughout this reporting quarter all operational assets were at Quang Tri, while the 332d TC Detachment remained behind at Camp Eagle. During the later stages of Randolph Glen Troop A provided direct support to the 3d Brigade 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) through the use of Hunter-Killer Teams (One AH-1G, one OH-6A). The teams often worked in close support of company size ground elements providing visual reconnaissance in front of the maneuver elements and securing their flanks and rear. The teams were also called on to reconnoiter areas of interest dealing with JRS's, SPAR's, and sensor activations. The remainder of the Troop's assets were used on missions in different areas of interest provided by Squadron and Division in an area extending from the DMZ up the Southern boundary of the A Shau Valley, which produced excellent results.
