BONG SON, Vietnam (IO) — While more than 100 North Vietnamese passed by with fixed bayonets, Sgt. Phil Davis silently hugged the ground and prayed.

Davis, a squad leader with A Co. 1st Bn., 50th Inf., 173rd Airborne Brigade, had been separated from his unit during a heavy rocket and small arms attack in a flat coastal area 30 miles north of Qui Nhon.

The 21-year-old sergeant was pinned down while trying to pull the wounded to safety.

"I lay there for what seemed like a couple of hours," Davis said. "There was nothing else I could do. Heavy fire was coming from two directions.

"The NVA finally swept through the perimeter," he said, "but were too intent on destroying the damaged tracks to notice me. They were going after the remaining vehicles when our own air strikes and artillery started coming in all around the perimeter and almost on top of me.

"After about two more hours, I decided to get up and find a way out. There were enemy in front and behind me, but I figured my best chance was to the front, where the heaviest air strikes had already hit."

"I ran about 500 meters through a wooded area without direct fire. There I picked up an M-47 from a dead NVA and found my way another mile or so to Highway 1 without seeing anyone," Davis added.

"I finally got picked up by APCs from my own battalion and rode back to our base camp."

Cut Off From Unit

GI Outmaneuvers 100 NVA

BONG SON, Vietnam (UPI) — While more than 100 North Vietnamese passed by with fixed bayonets, Sgt. Phil Davis silently hugged the ground and prayed.

Davis, a squad leader with A Co. 1st Bn., 50th Inf., 173rd Airborne Brigade, had been separated from his unit during a heavy rocket and small arms attack in a flat coastal area 30 miles north of Qui Nhon.

The 21-year-old sergeant was pinned down while trying to pull the wounded to safety.

"I lay there for what seemed like a couple of hours," Davis said. "There was nothing else I could do. Heavy fire was coming from two directions.

"The NVA finally swept through the perimeter," he said, "but were too intent on destroying the damaged tracks to notice me. They were going after the remaining vehicles when our own air strikes and artillery started coming in all around the perimeter and almost on top of me.

air strikes had already hit."

"I ran about 500 meters through a wooded area without direct fire. There I picked up an M-47 from a dead NVA and found my way another mile or so to Highway 1 without seeing anyone," Davis added.

"I finally got picked up by APCs from my own battalion and rode back to our base camp."
